56,700 Vote Not to Heed Lewis Call To Mines

Pickets May Bar Return of 37,450; New Attacks Made On Union Powers

Pittsburgh, (Monday) Jan. 23 (AP).—Nearly two-thirds of the rebellious United Mine Workers are refusing to obey their chief's suggestion to return to work today and end their 2-week-old walkout.

The box scores of weekend voting by UMW locals shows:

Stay on strike—56,700.
Obey Lewis—37,450.

Some United Mine Workers say they're fearful the 37,450 who voted to work won't be permitted to do so because of picketing by fellow union members.

In the Uniontown, Pa., area where 19,900 of 23,000 members voted to extend their strike into the third week, local UMW officials said picket groups are being organized. The officials asked not to be identified.

Last night a regular 11 p. m. (EST) shift failed to report at the Rivesville mine of the Consolidation Coal Company of West Virginia near Fairmont.

Company officials said several carloads of men, whom they identified as pickets, were waiting in the vicinity of the mine for the night shift to show up. UMW officials weren't available for comment.

At least one top UMW official wouldn't hazard a guess that all of the men who voted to go back to Lewis' three-day week will be permitted to go into the mines on the shift due to report later today.

It will mark the fourth consecutive week that at least some of Lewis' 400,000 soft coal diggers have been on strike. Lewis hasn't said much lately. He's been busy mapping his strategy to try and get a contract for the one which expired last June 30.

In recent days, the three-day week he's imposed on the industry has been meeting with more frequent attack.

Senator Robertson (D., Va.) is the latest Congressman who wants to limit Lewis' powers.

Robertson said in Washington tonight he is ready to introduce legislation which in certain cases will permit antitrust action against labor unions.

The Virginia Senator says his bill will be presented to the Senate Monday. Briefly it would:

Make unions subject to the antitrust laws in cases where:

1. A union was involved in an action which amounted to "unreasonable" restraint of trade.

2. The action affected industry "essential to the maintenance of the national economy, health or safety or any substantial segment thereof."

Lewis already is deep in law

McCloy Declares Saar, Berlin Issues Can Be Solved

John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner in Germany, said yesterday he has "no doubt" that the troublesome problems of final control of the rich Saar Basin and getting along with the Russians in Berlin can be solved.

He made this statement to reporters upon his arrival at Washington National Airport here for a week-long series of conferences on West German problems with President Truman and top State Department officials.

McCloy, who will confer with Mr. Truman and Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson today, said that while they plan to go over the whole range of German problems, the Saar and the uncertain course of American-Soviet relations in Berlin will have priority.

Glen Burnie, Md., Jan. 22 (AP).—Four children, 8 months to 5 years old, were killed today when an oil stove set fire to their home near here. They were suffocated by smoke from the blaze.

Anne Arundel County police said the young victims were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hartenstein of Furnace Branch.

The dead were listed as John, 5; Louis, 4; George, 3, and Rose Margret, 8 months.

Anne Arundel County police said the parents, who operate a filling station on the Furnace Branch road, had left the children asleep in the four-room cottage and had gone to the filling station, about 50 yards away.

Hartenstein said they were preparing to open the station for business when a neighbor ran up to tell them their house was afire.

'Rule' Called Move to Ease Congress' Toil

House Members Told Kefauver Bill Would Reduce Their Burden

(Text on Page 7)

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

District home rule is "an essential step" to reduce the "workload" on Congress, the National Committee for Strengthening Congress declared last night.

The group of distinguished Americans, with Robert Heller of Cleveland as chairman, called on members of the House to sign the discharge petition which would bring the Senate-approved Kefauver home rule bill to the House floor for a vote.

More than 90 of the necessary 218 members already have signed, home rule advocates report.

The letter, sent to every House member, said it is the committee's belief "that a solid majority" in the House favors the bill, pigeon holed by a hostile House District Committee. Heller pointed out that the bill had bipartisan Senate support.

The committee said Congress should "get rid of its extraneous workload," and that congressional management of what are essentially municipal functions forms, "a burden which is wholly unnecessary, undesirable and contrary to sound government."

Passage of the bill is therefore "essential," Heller wrote.

Along with the letter the committee inclosed a statement of the bill's scope and purpose and the committee's reasons for favoring it.

Meanwhile, officials of the Young Republican National Federation, headed by Chairman John Tope, announced it has written all House members calling for the home rule bill. The group, representing some 300,000 youthful GOP party members, had announced its intention of doing so.

Excise Slash Plans Facing Veto Threat

Truman Reported Set To Act If Bill Fails To Make Up Funds Loss

By The Associated Press

A highly-placed Democrat predicted yesterday that President Truman would slap on a veto if Congress passes a tax bill that slashes excise levies and does not at the same time pick up revenue from other sources.

This forecast, made privately by a lawmaker who conferred with the President Friday, came in the face of reports that excise-cutting legislation, disregarding other White House recommendations, might be speeded through the Senate.

Such Senate action probably would require advance assurance that the bill would be considered in the House and this appeared unlikely. The House likes to write its own tax legislation. But it also is being urged to push through such a bill.

Mr. Truman will send his tax message to Capitol Hill at noon today.

It is expected to call for a reduction of about 750 million dollars in excise on such things as fur coats, luggage, cosmetics, jewelry, communications and freight,

3 Men Are Killed As Small Planes Collide in Flight

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP). — Two small airplanes collided today and sent three men to a fiery death near Sunny South airport. The wreckage fell into a field and soon burned to a charred heap.

In the ruins of one plane, a Cessna, were two Virginians, their bodies seared almost beyond recognition. They were identified as Charles Faries, 29, and L. W. Hodges, 22, both of Roanoke.

The body of Fred Reese, a student flier, was found pinned in the debris of the other craft, a Piper Cub trainer.

A second occupant of the training plane was badly burned but able to walk away. He was George Lohr, 25, a flying instructor and a former Navy pilot.

Action Today On FEPC Bill Still Possible

Lesinski Will Seek To Force It to Floor Despite Plan to Give Another One Priority

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

Hope for forcing House consideration today of the Fair Employment Practices Commission bill was revived last night after what appeared to have been a weekend of skillful and particularly effective Administration maneuvering.

Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.), chairman of the Labor Committee, touched off the day's developments with an announcement that he would seek to force action today on the controversial FEPC measure even though Speaker Sam Rayburn had announced he would give priority to another bill.

He was faced, however, it was learned, with the threat of stiff competition from Southern Democratic chairmen of other committees who are eligible to seek recognition today to bring up different bills.

The Labor Committee chairman asserted that he was "surprised" at the Speaker's apparent decision to bypass the civil rights motion today. The Speaker announced Saturday that a bill to increase United States contributions to international organizations would come up.

But Representative John Kee (D., W. Va.), who as chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee would have to move to bring up the measure, said through a clerk of the committee that he "has no intention of seeking recognition."

Rayburn, a Texas Democrat and no advocate of FEPC, refused to comment yesterday on Lesinski's plans. Other House members said there are several possibilities for bringing up the controversial bill.

Other Ways of Doing It

The first is that the White House might succeed in applying pressure on Rayburn to change his mind when he attends the regular legislative strategy conference with Congressional Democratic leaders and President Truman this morning.

A second is that Administration leaders may persuade the chairmen of other committees with measures eligible for consideration today to follow Kee's plan and not ask for recognition.

At least two Southern Democrats, however, said last night they were determined to attempt to seek recognition. Such a rabid opponent of FEPC as Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.), chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, said he will attempt to force out a measure to provide 16,000 additional beds for veterans hospitals.

Representative J. Hardin Peterson (D., Fla.), chairman of the Public Lands Committee, hopes to call up the Alaska statehood, an Alaska homestead or the Hawaii statehood bill.

If they persist in competing with Lesinski for recognition, the Speaker will be in a position to give preference to one of them instead of the Labor chairman.

Under the House rules the Speaker is required to recognize committee chairmen to call up any legislation frozen for more than 21 days in the Rules Committee if they seek such recognition on the second and fourth Mondays of the month. The Speaker may choose from several chairmen seeking

Jury Clears Tucker of Mail Fraud

7 Associates Also Found Innocent in Failure to Get Car In Mass Production

Chicago, Jan. 22 (U.P.). — A Federal Court jury today found Preston Tucker and seven associates innocent of charges that they executed a 28-million-dollar fraud in attempting to put over a post-war "dream car" that never got into mass production.

The jury of seven men and five women deliberated more than 18½ hours over a span of two days in rejecting counts of mail fraud, Securities and Exchange Commission violations and conspiracy against the defendants.

The Government had contended that Tucker, president of the Tucker Corp., and the other defendants had perpetrated a gigantic fraud on stockholders and the public in their attempt to mass-produce a radically new Tucker Torpedo.

3-Way Victory, He Says

"This is a victory for the stockholders and dealers as well as for free enterprise," Tucker said.

He said he would "cooperate in any way I can" with any future reorganization plans for his defunct company.

Juror William Zacher, a carpenter and contractor, said "It wasn't too hard to reach a decision" and that most of the jurors had favored acquittal from the beginning.

Zacher said several members of the panel, however, had difficulty in determining whether there was "intent" to defraud. This had been a major question and one which Federal Judge Walter J. Labuy cautioned the jury to weigh carefully.

Indictments had included 25 counts of mail fraud, five of SEC violations and one of conspiracy. Some of the counts against three defendants were reduced last week, after the Government concluded its 11-week case.

Tucker fired public imagination with his dream of producing "the car of tomorrow," the Tucker Torpedo. It was to have an engine in the rear and a "crash chamber" under the dashboard to shield riders in the event of a collision.

Direct-Power Drive

A six-cylinder, 150-horsepower engine was to deliver "floating power" directly to the wheels, eliminating clutch, transmission and differential. Tucker said he planned to sell it for $1800.

Government attorneys charged the company spent more than 28 million dollars from the time of its inception in 1944, but produced only 31 cars. All the cars were hand-tooled, the Government said.

Tucker's codefendents were:

Floyd Cerf, Chicago stockbroker, alleged to have received $2,500,000 in commissions as underwriter of the stock.

Fred Rockelman, Chicago, executive vice president of the Tucker Corp., and former president of the Plymouth division of the Chrysler Corp.

Mitchell Dulia, Chicago, former general sales manager of the Tucker Corp.

Otis Radford, formerly of Detroit, Tucker's treasurer and former RFC employe.

Cliff Knoble, Chicago, Tucker advertising manager.

Robert Pierce, Detroit financier formerly associated with the Briggs Manufacturing Co.

Harold A. Karsten, North Hollywood, Calif., who helped form the Tucker Corp.

45,883 Visit Austrian Art On Last Day

New Record Set, Bringing Over-all Total to 875,153

A record-breaking 45,883 persons visited the Austrian Art Exhibition yesterday as the fabulous collection of paintings, sculpture and antiquities closed at the National Gallery of Art.

Yesterday's crowd brought the total of visitors to the show to 875,153 for its two-month stay here.

Although the number was considerably under the 964,970 that saw the German Art Show at the National in 1948, gallery officials said the Vienna exhibition was "a great success."

Packing experts today begin the delicate task of preparing the several hundred items in the show—a conservative 80 million dollars worth—for shipment to New York City. There they will go on exhibition Februàry 26 at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Then the works travel across country to the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco. In November, 1950, the exhibition opens at the Art Institute in Chicago.

Detective Opens 7 New Locks at Brink's With Knife

Boston, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Seven locked doors, through which a gang of bandits entered the Brink's Inc. vaults to steal $1,500,000, were forced open today by a detective using merely a penknife during police experiments with the building's security devices.

Special Officer Arthur Ahearn opened the seven doors by pressing the blade of the penknife against the lock plates although the locks all had been changed the day after the robbery, police revealed tonight.

Previously police believed the bandits used a master key to open the doors and gain entrance to the second-floor vault cage where the money was being checked by five employes.

Screen Actor Alan Hale Dies Of Pneumonia

Washington Native Had Been Movie Figure For Nearly 40 Years

Hollywood, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Alan Hale, 57, one of the most widely known of Hollywood's screen actors, died tonight at Hollywood Hospital.

Hale entered the hospital only last night for treatment of a liver ailment complicated by pneumonia.

He contracted a cold during a recent trip to Montana for the premiere of a picture in which he appeared. His condition became worse after he returned home.

The hulking 6-foot 2-inch actor had been in the movies for nearly 40 years.

His career in films was a series of ups and downs. Once he turned to inventing to supplement his movie income when he was not finding steady work.

At various times he was a writer, singer, actor and director. Once he tried newspaper work. Then he studied to become an osteopath before entering movies.

Hale played the role of the villain in "The Covered Wagon" and was one of the few top actors to make a successful changeover from silent pictures to talkies.

Born in Washington, D. C., on February 10, 1892, his real name was Alan McKahan. The son of a moderately well-off patent medicine manufacturer, he married the former Gretchen Hartman, his leading lady in early-day films at the old Biograph Studio.

Hale played the role of Little John first in the old Douglas Fairbanks version of "Robin Hood" and later with Errol Flynn in 1938.

After his early successes, Hale's career floundered and he turned to directing, but he was soon back in makeup.

After the talkies came in, Hale appeared in several minor roles and was forgotten by many moviegoers. Then he turned a small role in Frank Capra's "It Happened One Night" into a memo-

Action Taken In Defiance Of Protests By Allies

Halting of Traffic To Berlin Creates Situation Like That Before Airlift

Berlin (Monday) Jan. 23 (U.P.) Soviet authorities, openly defying stiff Western Allied protests, today halted United States military train and truck traffic at the border between Western Germany and the Russian zone.

The move resembled the Soviet tactics which finally led to the 1948 blockade of Berlin.

The United States Army transport office at Helmstedt, Western Allied checkpoint only a few miles from the Soviet checkpoint at Marienborn, said Russian guards had halted three U. S. military trains this morning.

At midnight the Russians imposed a "slowdown" blockade on vehicular traffic on the super highway linking West Germany with Berlin.

A transport officer said the trains were traveling from Frankfurt to Berlin, Berlin to Frankfurt, and Bremerhaven to Berlin. They were still being held up at 5:55 a. m. (1:55 p. m., Sunday, EST), he reported.

The officer declined to give any details of the stoppage.

"We are having trouble here," he merely reported. "Trains are being held up."

Army transport officers here said the east-bound trains were stopped just outside of Marienborn.

"Looks like the Russians are at it again," one officers said.

In the 1948 blockade, the Russians halted all trains to and from Berlin which is surrounded by Soviet-occupied territory. They began the blockade by first halting military trains, then extending the blockade to highway traffic before clamping down on all trains and traffic, including German civilian.

West German police at Helmstedt reported earlier that Red army guards were allowing only one vehicle every 30 minutes to enter the Soviet zone.

Berlin's three Western commanders only yesterday accused the Russians of violating four-power agreements on Berlin by stopping 11 trucks on the highway and confiscating their loads of scrap metal. They asked that the metal be released immediately.

Yeggs Use Meat Cleavers to Crack Safe for $1500

Safecrackers yesterday used the tools at hand—meat cleavers—to get at $1500 in a safe in a wholesale meat store at 417 Morse st. ne., police said.

With the cleavers and hammers, they hacked through a 5-inch layer of concrete and a metal sheet at the bottom of the 1500-pound safe.

Pvt. Joseph A. Vaccaro, of the Ninth Precinct, discovered the theft at 9 p. m. yesterday when he noticed a glass in the rear door of the establishment was broken.

The store, owned by Joseph Dekelboum, of 8509 Old Bladensburg rd., Silver Spring, was open Saturday until midnight. An employe told police he passed by the store about 9 a. m. yesterday and noticed nothing wrong.

Because of that police theorized that the cracking must have occured in the daytime and that the yeggs, using tools not exactly suited to the job, must have spent hours hacking away unobserved.

Vaccaro said he obtained the $1500 figure from a member of the Dekelboum family.

Police said the cleavers were sadly nicked.

But There's Little Time, Barron Warns

Sesqui Commission Welcomes 'Sound' Proposals for Fair

The Sesquicentennial Commission "would welcome" a "sound and timely proposal" from the American Institute of Architects for Freedom Fair building designs, executive vice chairman Carter T. Barron said last night.

But Barron said that despite the expected postponement of the fair from its July 4 opening date until April 15, 1951, there is little time to whip together substitute plans in place of the proposed "U. S. A." buildings.

Barron estimated that the fair buildings can be built five months after receipt of all plans and specifications. He said it would take at least a month, probably two, to prepare such plans.

Hence, any new design for the buildings would have to be definitely agreed upon by summer, Barron stressed.

He noted that the architects' group has called for an open competition on a Nation-wide scale to draw up new plans. Barron questioned whether that could be done within such a short time.

But, he said, he is sure the commission would "welcome" a proposal from the AIA which would produced new plans in quick time. He said he personally approved of the "U. S. A." idea—three buildshaped in the form of the letters. But he said he knew at least one other commission member, Senator M. M. Neely (D., W. Va.) already has approved the AIA's idea for a change.

Two-Committee Setup

McCarthy Urges Senate 'Team' To Probe U. S. Racketeering

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), yesterday proposed that at least two Senate committees team up for a full-scale inquiry into what he called Nation-wide racketeering and gambling activities.

Support for the suggestion came from Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), who already has introduced legislation that would provide $100,000 for such an inquiry by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

McCarthy's plan calls for letting the main job be handled by the special investigations committee that last summer looked into the activities of 5 percenters—men who collected fees, often 5 percent, for helping others get Government contracts.

McCarthy is a member of that committee and Kefauver is a member of the Judiciary group.

Under McCarthy's proposal, members of both units and possibly representatives of the Senate Commerce Committee would join forces in the investigation.

"Our special committee already has done some groundwork in looking into this matter of Nation-wide gambling and racketeering activities," McCarthy said. "Besides, the committee has a staff which is specially trained for this sort of thing."

He added, however, that it would require authorization of the Senate itself for the committee to participate in any actual inquiry of that nature. At present the group does not have jurisdiction in that field.

Kefauver said he felt certain a way would be found for the two committees to work together.

"I know the special committee has a lot of information which would be very helpful to our Judiciary group," Kefauver added.

So far the Judiciary unit has taken no action on Kefauver's bill. He said he expected it to be called up soon.

In introducing the measure on January 5, Kefauver told the Senate that for years there have been reports of the existence of a "national crime syndicate" invading many cities. He noted that Mayor deLesseps Morrison of New Orleans had asked the Federal Government to look into the matter.

Mantz Claims Speed Record, Spans U. S. in Under 5 Hours

New York, Jan. 22 (AP). — Speed Flier Paul Mantz spanned the continent today in 4 hours, 52 minutes, 58 seconds and claimed a new west-east record for planes with gasoline-fueled engines.

Mantz' time bettered by about seven minutes the time established last March by former Army Major Joe de Bona.

De Bona flew from California to New York in a single-engined, propellor-type plane in 5 hours, 5 seconds.

Flying a converted P-51, Mantz streaked over La Guardia Airport at 3:06:17 p. m. (EST). He took off from Lockheed Air Terminal, Burbank, Calif., at 10:13:19 a. m. (EST).

After zooming over La Guardia cage, he headed his plane east for a landing at New York City's International Airport at Idlewild, a few miles distant.

Before taking off in Burbank, Mantz said he hoped his flight would be the last of the transcontinental speed runs with gasoline-fueled engines. Such engines, he said, apparently have reached their peak in speed, with differences in flight time now due mainly to weather factors.

His plane was equipped with a 2000-horse power Rolls Royce Packard engine.

The 47-year-old Mantz said he averaged more than 500 miles an hour and hit a top speed of 580 an hour between Omaha and Chi-

Laws Hamper Oleo Despite Tax Victory

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

In spite of the overwhelming victory of the oleomargarine forces in Congress this session, margarine still doesn't have equal competition with butter.

Last Wednesday the Senate, by a four-to-one vote, passed the House bill removing the 64-year-old Federal taxes on margarine. After a few minor differences between the two houses are cleared away in conference, these unfair and discriminatory levies will be wiped out. The only Federal restriction to free trade in margarine will be a provision, inserted as a sop to members from butter States, requiring that in public eating houses, margarine must be served in triangular, diaper-shaped pats.

(One Congressman remarked that this provision is similar to requiring Florida orange growers to sell all their artificially colored oranges in a square shape. Most Florida oranges are tinted with artificial orange coloring.)

However, 22 States have State laws restricting free trade in margarine. Fifteen States prohibit either the manufacture or sale of yellow margarine, including several highly populated ones. These are Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Washington, Vermont, Wisconsin and Wyoming. Illinois prohibits the sale of yellow margarine, although some of the largest margarine factories in the country are within its borders. California and Nebraska prohibit the sale of yellow margarine in public eating places.

Several States have heavy taxes on margarine. Some States have conflicting restrictions. For instance, Idaho prohibits the sale of yellow margarine and also has a law taxing yellow margarine 10 cents a pound. North Dakota has a prohibitory 20 cents a pound tax. Utah has a 10-cent tax.

Other States have taxes on white margarine, also. Idaho taxes white margarine 5 cents a pound, Iowa 5 cents, North Dakota 10 cents, South Dakota 10 cents, Utah 5 cents and Wisconsin 15 cents.

High occupation license fees also are assessed. Retailers are taxed $5 a year in Idaho, 50 cents a year in Massachusetts, $1 a year in Minnesota, Nebraska and North Dakota; $2 in Pennsylvania, $2 to $200 in Vermont and $25 in Wisconsin.

Wholesalers are hit harder. They are assessed $50 a year in California, $25 in Colorado, $25 in Idaho, $1 in Minnesota, $20 in Montana, $25 in Nebraska, $25 in North Carolina, $5 in North Dakota (for 2 years), $2 in Pennsylvania, $25 in Vermont and $500 in Wisconsin.

Hotels and boarding houses serving margarine in Pennsylvania are assessed $2 a year. Public eating houses are taxed $2 a year in California. In Wisconsin hotels and restaurants are taxed $25; boarding houses, bakeries and confectionery manufacturers $5. Consumers are taxed $1 for each pound bought outside the State.

Manufacturers are hit hard in several States. They are charged $100 in California; $25 a year in Colorado; $1 in Minnesota; $20 "and up" in Montana; $100 in Nebraska; $10 for 2 years in North Dakota; $2 in Oregon and $1000 in Wisconsin.

In the last year prohibition of the sale of yellow margarine has been repealed in several States. Most widely known was in Ohio, where it was abolished by an overwhelming popular vote, with the State's most important dairying counties voting in favor of repeal. Others that repealed laws prohibiting yellow margarine were California, Michigan, and New Hampshire.

Connecticut repealed high license fees, and also a ban on serving margarine in public institutions. Idaho sharply reduced license fees; Washington repealed a tax of 15 cents a pound on white margarine, and Wyoming a 10-cent tax on "vegetable oil margarine" which would include all margarine. Tennessee repealed a series of restrictions. Pennsylvania and New Hampshire repealed laws forbidding margarine in State and other public institutions. North Carolina repealed a high wholesalers' license and a ban on margarine in public eating houses.

The Federal taxes repealed by Congress were: 10 cents a pound on yellow margarine and ¼ cent on white, plus the following license fees: for manufacturers, $600 a year; for wholesalers of yellow margarine, $480 a year, and for white, $200 a year. For retailers, the tax was $48 a year for yellow and $6 for white.

In only one respect did the action by Congress add to the restrictions. In States that formerly permitted the serving of yellow margarine in public eating houses in the same manner as other spreads, the new Federal law calls for it to be served in triangular shape.

Many lawyers say this silly congressional restriction is discriminatory and unconstitutional. It may be tested soon.

Six schools will share in the scholarships: Howard University, $2000; Brandeis University, $2000; New School for Social Research, $2000; New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations, $2000; Roosevelt College, $5000; Chaim Weizmann Institute in Israel, $5000.

A $10,000 grant-in-aid has been made to the University of Chicago to make an analysis of school and college textbooks "for the purpose of rooting out the teaching of prejudice and discrimination."

The foundation is setting up prize awards of $500 each for the best newspaper articles, editorial, magazine piece, broadcast or telecast, story, ply and film "dealing with a labor theme and honestly portraying the labor struggle."

An achievement award of $1000 will be made for the second time this year. Senator Frank P. Graham (D., N. C.), former president of the University of North Carolina, was the recipient of this prize last year.

The trustees of the foundation set aside $5000 for the annual Hillman lecture series, conducted last year by Harold J. Laski, the British economist. Another $5000 was allocated for rehabilitation of refugees in Israel.

Dredge Starts Digging Sand From Beneath Grounded 'Mo'

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—A pipeline dredge joined the Army Engineers' dredge Comber today in the Navy's giant task to free its mighty battleship Missouri from the mud of Chesapeake Bay.

The pipeline dredge, the Washington, went to work digging the sand from beneath the ship. The Comber isn't equipped for dredging under the ship and is cutting trenches 40 feet wide on each side of it.

Although in no danger, the Missouri lies grounded outside of Hampton Roads harbor just a short distance from the place where the famous battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac was fought during the Civil War.

The first party of men to go ashore since the grounding was transported to land today by LSIs. It included 400 men, who will return to the ship Monday. The other 71 officers and 1400 men remained aboard.

Officials said the work of removing the ship's stores was completed today.

Monday, the Navy will put its heavy beaching gear in place. This will include cables, anchors and winches. While the beach gear rigs are being laid out, ammunition will be unloaded to further lighten the load the Missouri was carrying.

The Missouri will use its own winches—power-driven drums for coiling a rope or cable—to create the tension to be used in the effort to free the 45,000-ton ship. The power to operate the winches will be supplied by two submarine rescue ships, the Kittywake and the Chanticleer. Both were already supplying power.

Suction freezes the bottom of the Missouri to the mud. Plans are to build up tension on 10 or 12 huge cables strung between the ship and anchors embedded 1000 feet astern. Each cable can carry a force of 80 tons before the anchors would be dislodged, engineers say, so a maximum of 800 tons can be built up to help break the suction.

Palotti Is Beatified

Vatican City, Jan. 22 (AP).—Vincenzo Pallotti was raised to the blessed of the Roman Catholic Church today in the first beatification of the 1950 Holy Year.

Four thousand representatives of the Pious Society of Missions, founded by Pallotti, attended the ceremony in St. Peter's basilica.

Truman Is Seen in Hot Water With Lucas on Appointments

By the United Press

President Truman reportedly was in hot water yesterday with his Senate majority leader, Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, over appointment of two Chicagoans to top national defense posts.

Lucas' colleague, Senator Paul W. Douglas (D., Ill.), also was said to be unhappy.

The appointments are those of Hubert E. Howard to the chairmanship of the Munitions Board, and of John F. Floberg as Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

The story is that Mr. Truman broke his own "how-to-get-along-with-Congress" rule when he made the appointments without consulting Lucas and Douglas.

Majority party Senators expect to be, and usually are, consulted before constituents are chosen for lucrative jobs. That goes double for Lucas, who, as Democratic leader, must pilot the President's legislative program through the Senate.

When both Lucas and Douglas protested the omission, they were advised that failure to consult them was due to poor staff work, rather than any effort to "go around, under, or through" them.

Howard and Floberg are both regarded in Senate Democratic circles as voting Republicans. Lucas reportedly was particularly miffed because he faces a stern fight for reelection from former GOP Representative Everett Dirksen.

Howard is a 60-year-old coal company president and has lead and zinc mining interests. Floberg is 34 and was an attorney with Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin Ellis. The firm is counsel for the Chicago Tribune, which opposes both Lucas and Douglas.

Arrest Foils Blasting Of Embassy in Rome

Rome, Jan. 22 (AP).—Police arrested today a 63-year-old Italian carrying a bag of high explosives near the Spanish Embassy. Police said he had planned to blow up the building.

They identified the man as Giusseppe de Luisis, and quoted him as saying he was an anarchist and had "planned to blow up the embassy to vindicate the martyred Spanish people."

Red Newspaper Barred On Rokossovsky Photo

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—The latest issue of the Communist newspaper Pszerkroj has been banned by the Polish government and all copies have been confiscated, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported today.

The agency said the newspaper was banned because it printed a picture of the new Polish chief of defense, Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, wearing a Russian instead of a Polish uniform.

McGrath 'Buys' 100 Republican Box Dinners

Congressional investigators who delve into the next political campaign are going to be mystified. Attorney General Howard McGrath, who used to be Democratic National Committee chairman, gave $100 to the Republicans. And Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, who is as Republican as any Republican can be, gave $100 to the Democrats.

It seems, according to Victor Johnston, manager of the Republican Senate Campaign Committee, that the two met accidentally. They are good friends, despite party differences.

Anyway, they began to twit each other about their respective party dinners in Washington. The Democrats will dine, at $100 a plate, February 16. Parodying their opponents, Republicans will stage a $1 box lunch dinner on February 6, at Uline Arena.

The result, insists Johnston, was that each agreed to buy a place at the other party's dinner at the same price. Brewster handed McGrath a check for 100 bucks. And McGrath wrote Brewster inclosing his check for the same amount.

"I know," McGrath wrote Brewster, "we will both enjoy the parties. Since I can only use one basket lunch on that day, I trust that you will give the remaining tickets to deserving Republicans in Maine who might not otherwise be able to attend the party."

Now, Republican Brwester wonders, where did Democrat McGrath get the idea that Maine Republicans are so hard up they couldn't afford a dollar dinner without Democratic largesse.

Vogeler to Be Tried Soon, Hungary Says

Vienna, Austria, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Hungary has announced that Robert Vogeler, American businessman held incommunicado for eight weeks, will be tried in public shortly, United States Legation officials said today.

The Hungarian government did not say how Vogeler was charged.

Two weeks ago, however, Hungary sent the United States a note declaring Vogeler was seized November 18 on "well-founded suspicion" of espionage and sabotage and would not be released.

United States officials here said Hungarian Deputy Premier Matyas Rakosi told United Minister to Hungary Nathaniel P. Davis Friday that Vogeler "would be brought to public trial within the next weeks."

Vogeler is an assistant vice president and eastern European manager of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.

The communications executive was arrested by Hungarian police as he was returning to Vienna in his car. The United States promptly protested the arrest and Hungary replied by accusing the United Stated of interfering in that country's internal affairs.

The United States retaliated by closing the Hungarian consulates in Cleveland and New York. Travel by Americans in Hungary also was barred.

Detained with Vogeler were Edgar Sanders, a Briton, who was the local representative of I. T. & T., and Imre Geiger, a Hungarian, who directed an I. T. & T. subsidiary. Neither has been released.

Banker Is Active In Rightist Party

Reds Impose Road Blockade

Germany by the merger of two right-wing groups.

Black-booted former German army officers attended the organization meeting here last night at which about 250 functionaries sang "Deutschland Ueber Alles" (Germany Over All), the national anthem that German soldiers sang in two world wars. The West German republic's government has frowned on the song as too nationalistic.

The new party appeals frankly to nationalists and militarists with the use of the word "reich" (empire) in its name, German Reich Party. It was formed by a merger of the National Democratic Party (DRP) and German Right Party (NDP). These two parties received 500,000 votes in the general elections last year and elected five representatives in the 402-man West German parliament.

The party is headed by Franz Richter, former leader of the DRP, and Dr. Heinrich Leuchtgens, an aged banker who was leader of the NDP. Both are members of the Bonn parliament.

About 10 Communists invaded last night's meeting and shouted, "We know you! You are old Nazis. We know your faces."

Several in the meeting approached the Communists with waving fists and shouted, "Throw them out." But after five minutes of exchanging shouts, the Communists were allowed to stay.

Stalin Confers With Premier Of Red China

London, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—Soviet Premier Josef Stalin received Chinese Communist Premier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai tonight, Radio Moscow reported.

Apparently Mao Tze-tung, president of the Peiping regime who has been here since December 16 negotiating a new Sino-Russian treaty, did not attend. Stalin received Mao the day after he arrived in Moscow.

Stalin and Chou presumably discussed the new treaty, which will replace the one the Russians signed with the Nationalist government in 1945.

Seattle's Rejection of 2 British Bids Jolts Campaign to Earn More Dollars in the U. S.

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Electrical equipment for the municipal power company in Seattle, Wash., threatens to become an international issue affecting Britain's drive to earn more dollars in the United States.

The city has rejected two British bids for transformers, rectifiers and switching equipment even though they were far below the bids of American companies.

Paul R. Hendricks, the city purchasing agent, told The Washington Post by telephone that the firm of Ferranti, Ltd., one of the two British bidders, had offered to deliver the transformers for $200,000 less than the amount of the lowest American bid.

Feared 'to Take Chance'

"We rejected the British bids," he said, "because they were not in accord with our specifications." He explained that the equipment was needed for a remote and inaccessible place, and that the city engineers felt they "didn't want to take a chance" on foreign-made equipment.

But American and British officials here, working together to encourage British exports, were worried by the decision. The Economic Cooperation Administration, in particular, has been trying to persuade the British to sell more energetically and earn more dollars here.

ECA officials fear that the Seattle decision, if sustained, will dishearten British exporters and prove there is no real future for British manuaftcturers in this market.

For months ECA has been telling the British to: (1) branch out from their traditional export lines, such as china, fine woolens and other luxury goods; (2) branch out from the New York and Northeast area into Western and Southern markets and (3) get their costs and prices down.

Two Answer Invitation

Two British companies, taking ECA's advice, answered the Seattle invitation for bids, put out on December 8. One of them, Ferranti, Ltd., wrote that they could sell, ship and deliver the transformers for $515,000, including payment of 15 percent duty.

The other, the English Electric Co., bid $572,000 for the transformers. The next lowest bid, from the Pennsylvania Transformer Co., was for $720,000. The General Electric Corp. bid $751,000 and one of the American bids, from Gough Industries of San Diego, Calif., went as high as $1,321,009.

After getting the bids, the Seattle City Council asked its corporation counsel whether it could legally award the contract to a foreign firm. Yes, was the answer; there is no Federal money in the Seattle power installation, and therefore the "Buy American" Act of Congress did not prevent going abroad.

The city must give preference to local manufacturers in awarding contracts, but no Seattle manufacturer offered to make the equipment.

"Technicality" Admitted

In the end, however, the city turned down the British bids on what Hendricks conceded was a "technicality." He was asked whether the decision was influenced by the fact that the low bidders were British firms.

"We have told British firms," he answered, "that the door is still open on other equipment. But we have also told them to have their specifications in order in the future."

Hendricks said that if he had accepted the British bids "I imagine we would have had considerable reaction from American manufacturers."

So far, he said, the contract has not been awarded to anyone, and his department is still "studying" the American bids.

De Gasperi to Continue Trying to Form Cabinet

Rome, Jan. 22 (AP). — Italian President Luigi Linaudi told Premier Alcide de Gasperi today to keep trying to form a new government.

The Premier spent Sunday consulting political leaders on the solution of the Cabinet crisis which started January 11.

There still is no indication that the completion of a new government is imminent.

Invasion Craft Hit Heavily, Chinese Nationalists Report

Taipei, Formosa, Jan. 22 (AP).—Extensive new raids against Communist small craft and troop concentrations along the mainland coast were announced tonight by the Chinese Nationalist air force.

Targets included Amoy and Foochow and extended northward to Hangchow Bay, 100 miles south of Shanghai.

The communique said B-24 bombers set huge fires at a Foochow drydock and other shore establishments and heavily damaged invasion craft all along the coast.

The Luichow peninsula opposite Hainan island also was raided again, and Mustang fighters scouted over Shanghai.

Gen. Chou Chih-jou, commander of the air force, said in an interview that he intended to shatter Red invasion forces before they could even set out for Formosa, Hainan and other Nationalist islands. In any event, he declared, he did not believe the Reds could invade Formosa until they got an air force and navy of their own.

He described the Nationalist airmen as extremely reliable, saying only 50 of them, including 20 pilots, had deserted to the Reds. Ten of these since have returned to the Nationalist fold, he added.

Chou admitted the maintenance problem would become "very serious unless a solution is found."

In connection with this hint at a desire for American aid, a group of American officials was being taken on a tour of Formosa this weekend by Nationalist authorities. The aim was to convince the Americans, headed by Charge d'Affaires Robert Strong, that things are being run well on this island redoubt.

Lawyers Accuse FBI Of Probing Beliefs

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The National Lawyers Guild declared in a report to President Truman yesterday that the Federal Bureau of Investigation is conducting a systematic search by illegal methods into the political beliefs and affiliations of "many thousands, perhaps millions" of private citizens.

The report included recommendations that the President order a stop to the practice complained of, and that he constitute a committee of private citizens to make a thorough investigation of the FBI.

The guild, the subject of much past controversy, is an organization of attorneys with generally left-of-center views. It was listed in 1944 as a Communist front by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. A member of that committee, Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) last week demanded that the committee investigate the guild.

A Lengthy Analysis

The guild's president, and a member of a special committee that prepared the report on the FBI, is Clifford J. Durr. Now practicing law in Washington, Durr was formerly a member of the Federal Communications Commission.

The guild's document consisted of a lengthy analysis of 28 FBI investigative reports. These had become available for public scrutiny, over the vigorous protests of the FBI, when they were put in evidence during the first trial of Judith Coplon last summer. They are the reports referred to in papers in her possession. They are not about investigations of her, but of other persons.

The guild's study declared that the activities carried on by the FBI in direct violation of Federal law are divulgence and use of information acquired by wire tapping, opening of private mail without a search warrant, and entering and searching a private home without a warrant.

The report says the 28 FBI documents "demonstrate that the interception of phone conversations by FBI wire tapping is so common and so widespread as to constitute one of the basic investigative techniques of its program."

The Coplon reports further show, the guild charges, that wire tapping was done "in the absence of any reasonable indication that a Federal crime has been committed or is contemplated."

Informant T-3

Taking passages in one report attributed to FBI "Confidential Informant T-3," the guild declares:

"It appears from these passages that T-3 gave detailed descriptions of numerous trivial conversations, that T-3 never entered into any of these conversations, that, although many of these conversations were on an intimate level, T-3 often did not know the full name of one of the speakers, sometimes could only spell the name phonetically, sometimes did not know the name at all, and often knew nothing about the speaker.

"As to some of these conversations, it is plain that the persons speaking were not in each other's presence. The irresistible conclusion is that T-3 is—or at least includes—a record of intercepted conversations over [the investigation subject's] phone."

The volume of FBI wire tapping is such, the guild argues, that if one takes the divulgence of each phone-tapped conversation as a separate violation of law, it can be concluded that "on a strict numerical basis, the FBI may commit more Federal crimes than it ever detects."

Intercepted Mail

One of the 28 files, the guild states, makes it "quite clear that the FBI intercepted and opened mail in the course of transmission."

In at least two other investigations, "such action seems likely to have occurred, although the evidence to that effect is not so conclusive."

The reports also disclose three cases, the guild charges, in which it seems clear that the FBI entered a private home and searched personal effects without a warrant, thus violating the Fourth Amendment.

The guild argues that the 28 reports are not mere random papers in files, but rather true investigative reports. Hence they can be taken to show not only what FBI methods are, but also what the FBI is looking for and its motivations.

The guild concludes the reports show that "the establishment of a Federal offense was not the primary objective."

The investigations, rather, "were attempting to determine not what crimes the subject had committed, but what kind of a person he was with reference to his social, political and economic views, his personal associations and his organizational affiliations."

The guild charges that the FBI has taken its right to investigate threats to internal security as "a pretext for widespread investigation of persons in situations having no reasonable relation to internal security."

It declares that the FBI's criteria of "loyalty," as disclosed by the Coplon reports, "are subjective and reactionary."

Finally, the guild report argues, the FBI statements that it taps telephones in a very limited type of cases involving only "espionage, grave risks to internal security or where human lives are in jeopardy" are false.

The guild declares that the Coplon reports show the basis is not thus limited, but that wiretapping is conducted on "a general, virtually random basis," and in cases where there is no suspicion of actual or prospective violation of law.

Besides Durr, members of the committee that prepared the report are:

Frederick K. Beutel, professor at the Nebraska University Law School; Thomas I. Emerson, professor at the Yale Law School; O. John Rogge, formerly as Assistant Attorney General and now practicing law in New York; James A. Cobb, formerly a Municipal Court judge here; and local attorneys Joseph Forer and Robert J. Silberstein.

AF's Bombing of Germany 'Dismal Failure,' Andrews Says

Marshall Andrews, reporter for The Washington Post, accuses the Air Force of "empire building" and says it "failed dismally" in its efforts to bomb Germany out of the last war.

Andrews gives his views in a book, "Disaster Through Air Power," published today by Rinehart & Co., New York. He has been a newspaperman since 1921, served in both World Wars and is a student of military history.

Andrews' complaint is not with strategic bombing, but with what he calls a "new religion with its own militant priesthood" among air-power advocates.

He contends the Air Force has concentrated on heavy bombers at the expense of fighters and ground support aircraft for tactical use.

In a summary of the chief elements of military strength of the Western nations in a struggle with Russia, he lists this order of importance:

Industrial production capacity, strategic air power, sea power, available military manpower, uneasiness of Russia's satellite nations.

Andrews says strategic air action—attacking a nation's interior to destroy capacity for war—"demonstrated itself to be an incredibly expensive method of achieving indecisive results" in World War II. Its contribution, he says, was "not victory, as promised, but destruction on so vast a scale that the whole of Europe was beggared."

Counting the dead, injured and damage in enemy countries, Andrews finds that:

"If frightfulness is the aim of warfare, the Air Forces seem to have been eminently successful in this case, but if defeat of the enemy is the aim, they failed dismally. Germany did not capitulate until after Allied and Russian ground armies had met on the Elbe."

The author criticizes all three services for failing to achieve the goal of unification.

"There is greater duplication and waste under 'unification' than before, and each of the three services can make definite and appreciable contributions to economy," he said.

Andrews favors a military setup composed of three elements: A combat force equipped and trained to fight on land, at sea and in the air; a logistical force to supply the combat force, and a support force to train men and to obtain the needed food and equipment.

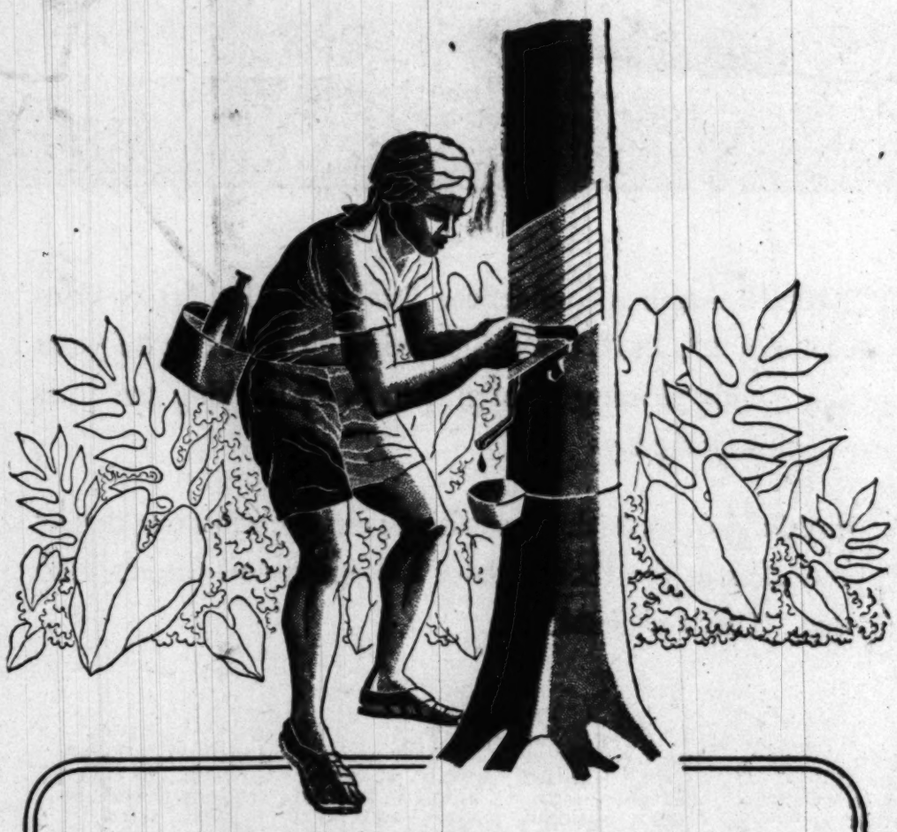
Natural Rubber Growers Set Up Bureau To Expand U. S. Market . . .


Real Rubber Facts
Natural rubber is the No. 1 dollar-earner for sterling countries.
In 1949, the United States imported about 600,000 tons of natural rubber from Southeast Asia.
Natural rubber is now selling at pre-war prices. Its production and price are unrestricted and unsubsidized.
Natural rubber is the key to the prosperity of Southeast Asia—including over 400,000 independent rubber farmers in Malaya alone.
* * *
In addition to being the chief ingredient for tires, natural rubber has a rapidly growing market in latex foam cushioning and a great potential market in rubber roads.
Natural Rubber Bureau
1631 K Street, N. W. Washington 6, D. C.
Write for new free booklet on rubber roads — "Stretching The Highway Dollar"
Leading American statesmen and economists — including President Truman, Secretary of State Acheson, and "Marshall Plan" Administrator Hoffman — have been urging overseas countries to sell more goods to the U. S.
TRADE BALANCE NEEDED
They point out that Marshall Aid cannot go on forever.
They point out that a continuing unbalance of trade between the U. S. and other countries can end only in world bankruptcy and economic chaos.
They point out that Americans obviously do not want to achieve a balance of world trade by cutting down U. S. exports. That would lead to depression — here and abroad. The rest of the free world needs U. S. goods. A high standard of U. S. prosperity is the keystone of an expanding world economy.
ONLY ONE ANSWER
So they all come to the same conclusion — that the only answer is for the U. S. to IMPORT MORE GOODS!
And — they ALL AGREE that the real answer is for industries in other countries to do a better SELLING JOB over here — to study U. S. markets, to advertise, to merchandise their products.
And it is for just such purposes that the leading dollar-earner of all the industries in the sterling area — the rubber producer — has set up the Natural Rubber Bureau in the U. S.
TOP DOLLAR EARNER
Natural rubber alone earned nearly as many dollars for the sterling area last year as did all of Britain's manufactured goods.
And this was in spite of the fact that natural rubber was selling to American rubber manufacturers this past year at less than pre-war prices — while most other major agricultural products in the world were selling at two or three times pre-war costs.
And the natural rubber producers are going about expanding their market in the American way — by market research, by advertising, by promoting their product.
The rubber growers in Malaya — over 400,000 of them — have taxed themselves an extra one-twentieth of a cent per pound to finance this program (natural rubber sold at year end at 18c a pound in New York). They already were taxing themselves to provide funds for research to improve their product. Rubber growers in Ceylon and French Indo-China are cooperating in this program.
TO PROMOTE NEW USES
The British Rubber Development Board, representing these rubber growers of Southeast Asia, has established the Natural Rubber Bureau in Washington, D. C., to promote new uses for natural rubber in the U. S.
They are trying to sell more in the U. S., to earn more dollars to bridge the gap, to make Marshall Aid less needed, to make it possible for other countries to buy more U. S. goods, and to achieve a stability and prosperity among free nations.

Election Unit Told to Seek Court Decision

J. Bond Smith, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee for Montgomery County, said last night the Board of Election Supervisors should go into court immediately to determine whether the State or county laws should be obeyed in nomination of County Council officers.

The County Council Saturday asked the election board to determine which of the laws it would obey so that court action could be taken immediately.

Chairman Smith said he does not feel a determination by the election board would mean anything but that the question would not be decided until it is passed upon by the Court of Appeals of Maryland.

Smith said he had recommended several days ago to the Central Committee that the election board be requested to take the matter into circuit court so that prompt judicial determination could be obtained.

The State law, known as the Lindsay law, provides that candidates for the council must be nominated in party primaries in a manner similar to that for candidates for the General Assembly.

The law enacted by the county council last May provides for nomination without party label with all voters voting in the primary instead of just party members.

Late Drinking Forum Topic

Two solutions for the District's after-hour drinking problems were suggested in a WWDC radio forum last night on "Are Changes Desirable in District of Columbia Liquor Laws?"

Norman A. Bomze, proprietor of the 400 Restaurant, wanted an extension of legal drinking hours to 2 a. m. on Sunday to combat the illegal operations of after-hour clubs.

"There are now more than 600 unlicensed bottle clubs operating in the District," he said, "producing no revenue, under no legal control and taking revenue from legitimate concerns."

Seymour S. Guthman, attorney, offered another approach, suggesting legislation to "curb or regulate after-hour clubs." Alan W. Payne, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, said that a congressional act would be necessary before hours could be extended or bottle clubs regulated.

The fourth member of the forum was Hilliard Schulberg, executive secretary of the District Liquor Dealers' Association, who spoke in favor of a "fair trade" pricing law for the industry, which Payne said the ABC board probably would protest in the interests of the consumer.

Leonard S. Melrod of the District of Columbia Bar Association was moderator of the discussion, which was presented under the auspices of the Junior Bar Association and WWDC.

Gilks Named Budget Chief Of D. C. Chest Federation

William G. Gilks, Government unit manager in the Community Chest campaigns of the last six years, has been named budget manager and secretary of the executive committee of the Community Chest Federation, it was announced yesterday.

W. G. Gilks

Gilks, who will assume his new duties February 1 in addition to the Government unit work, succeeds William H. Bartlett. Bartlett has been appointed secretary of the recreation and group work section of United Community Services, the Washington unit in the Chest Federation.

The reassignments reduce the federation headquarters staff by two persons, as Bartlett's secretary has also been reassigned.

Gilks, who also will serve as secretary of other standing committees of the federation, came to Washington from Texas in 1944 as manager of the Government unit for the Community War Fund.

During the past six campaigns, Government workers have contributed just under 10 million dollars through the unit managed by Gilks.

Ad Club Meeting Postponed for Week

A last-minute cancellation by the speaker has forced postponement of the weekly meeting of the Washington Advertising Club, President William F. Sigmund announced yesterday.

However, the regular schedule will resume on January 31, Sigmund said, with retired Vice Admiral Emory S. Land, head of the Air Transport Association, speaking on "Air Transportation, Fish or Fowl?" The group meets at Hotel Statler at 12:30 p. m.

Police Nip Attempt To Blast Radio Tower

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 22 (AP).—An attempt to blast down the main antenna tower of Station WBT failed today.

Police, tipped off, lay in wait and captured a man they said lit the fuse and tossed five sticks of dynamite under the 435-foot tower.

They held Chesley Morgan Lorell, 38, of Columbia, S. C. No charge had been filed tonight.

WBT has been involved in labor difficulties for several months, but there was no immediate indication this had any connection with the dynamite attempt.

'Red' Warren Is Keeping His Head

By Richard L. Coe

ROBERT PENN WARREN, here to read portions of his new novel at the Institute of Contemporary Arts while his previous one, "All the King's Men," gallops into its ninth week in celluloid form at the Playhouse, is as imperturbable as Gov. Willie Stark was excitable.

Which should hardly surprise anyone familiar with "Red" Warren's career and writings. But in a world where film reporters are accustomed to shattering pronouncements about forthcoming pictures, mighty plans and much trumpetings, imperturbability can be a startling characteristic.

This serenity seems to come from the fact that Warren thinks of himself not as a best-selling novelist and inspirer of an Academy Award movie contender, but as a poet and teacher. He takes the long view.

When it came time to film "King's Men," for instance, Warren blandly admitted he knew nothing whatever about the movies. It was sold outright to Producer-Director-Writer Robert Rossen and, remarks Red, "I presumed he knew what he was about."

Has the success of the picture and the book made added audiences for his poetry and university lectures?

"I'm inclined to think not," says Warren. "If the poetry sales had climbed, I'm sure my publishers would have been delighted to tell me so. They haven't had a word to report on the matter. As for my students, I think they're more interested in their grades than in my publicity."

Those students are in the graduate school at the University of Minnesota and Red has the feeling that the general run of them is increasingly cheerless. There's something decidedly wrong with our educational system, thinks this man who's been teaching for 20 years.

His poetry is far closer to Warren's heart than novels or plays and it was in verse form as a play that the "King's Men" story was originally conceived. Several college groups have done it, but the author still is unsatisfied with its stage form and has no desire to see it published until he has reworked it extensively.

As to the question he's always asked—was Huey Long his model for Willie Stark?—it's the one question he never answers.

Could it be that of a man once on the staff of Louisiana State University, it's a mighty silly question to ask?

A MEETING will be held tomorrow night at the Willard of the Citizens Committee for the Legitimate Theater in the Nation's Capital to welcome the newly formed group headed by Mrs. Rufus Lusk, jr., and to hear a report on progress from an ANTA official . . . Melvin C. Hildreth, chairman of the group formed last March, will preside prior to taking off on a trip to Europe . . . Steps taken and hoped for will be discussed and it is likely the ANTA official will have news of what his board thinks of the lease offered on the Belasco by the Public Buildings Administration . . . The ANTA board meets this afternoon in New York to discuss its many affairs, but the Belasco matter will be on the agenda.

FORD'S THEATER, Baltimore, has a busy three weeks ahead . . . Tonight Mae West brings her "Diamond Lil" in for a week's run . . . Next week will see "Lend an Ear," the musical revue with John Beal and Gloria Hamilton featured . . . The week of February 13 presents the fourth of the Theater Guild subscription plays, "The Madwoman of Chaillot."

TWO SPECIAL film showings tonight: "Pacific Panorama," round-up of films about Asia, presented by the Washington World Affairs Center, Department of Interior auditorium, 18th and C sts., at 8 . . . "Prejudice," feature film under auspices of the Protestant Film Commission in cooperation with the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, at the Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q sts. nw., 8:30.

MRS. TRUMAN heads tonight's first audience for "Ice-Capades of 1950," the popular ice revue opening a run at Uline's . . . The opening is sponsored by the Wellesley Club of Washington for its scholarship fund; intermission time will find young people of "ice-skating" embassies—the Netherlands, Sweden, England, Canada and Luxemburg — parading on the ice in native costumes.

Heller's Statement On Home Rule Bill

Following is the text of a statement sent to House members by Robert Heller, chairman of the National Committee for Strengthening Congress, in support of the District home-rule bill (S. 1527).

Why S. 1527 Is Necessary.—Our letter of December 27, 1949, to members of the House and Senate pointed out the strengths and weaknesses in the operations of the last session of Congress. We emphasized that Congress, to discharge adequately its responsibilities to the Nation and to the world, must act promptly to reduce its extraneous workload. Passage of S. 1527, the home rule bill, is an essential step in this direction. It will virtually eliminate the necessity for Congress to act as a city council on day-to-day matters which relate solely to the workings of the city of Washington. The bill also assures that Congress retains full authority to intervene in District affairs whenever the situation so demands.

In the last session of Congress alone, several thousand valuable man-hours were spent by busy Congressmen and Senators on purely District matters. These included such local trivia as the elimination of weeds, the regulation of podiatry and the destruction of starlings. The time for Congress to relieve itself of the necessity to sit once every two weeks as the city council for the District of Columbia and to consider such purely local matters is long overdue.

How S-1527 Will Help the Congress. The bill would vest power in a city council, composed of District citizens, to pass local laws to govern the District of Columbia. The council would be composed of nine members elected by District residents and two additional members appointed by the President. Except for minor ordinances, any laws passed by the city council would, before becoming effective, lie over for 45 days while Congress is in session. During this period Congress could by concurrent resolution veto the proposed law. As a result, neither the District Committees of the House or Senate, or the House and Senate as a whole, would need to take positive action in order that necessary legislation for the District become law. Congress would always be in a position to modify or revoke the action of the District council. In fact it could abolish the council or modify its powers. In this way the interest of the Nation in the affairs of its National Capital would at all times be protected.

Establishing a local legislature to relieve Congress' workload is not new. It is substantially the same method that Congress has used successfully for years in governing the territories, such as Hawaii and Puerto Rico, which are under its exclusive jurisdiction. The territorial legislatures are at all times answerable to Congress, and Congress may step in and take over at any time. Congress, however, is relieved of the burden of passing day-to-day regulations for territorial government. Enactment of S-1527 would put this satisfactory method to work in the District of Columbia.

S. 1527 Is the Product of Years of Careful Work and Has Strong Bipartisan Support. The Home Rule bill is the result of exhaustive study and work by congressional committees and by interested local and national groups, both partisan and nonpartisan. In the Seventy-ninth Congress, the Joint Congressional Committee of the Organization of Congress, in its report which led to the enactment of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, urged that Congress divest itself of the duty of acting as city council for the District. A joint committee in the Eightieth Congress, headed by Representative Auchincloss (R., N. J.) and Senator Ball (R., Minn.), held exhaustive hearings and drafted the basic Home Rule bill, H. R. 6227. This bill was reported out but reached the floor of the House too late to come up for final vote before the end of that Congress.

The 1948 platform of both major parties urged Home Rule for the District. A Senate subcommittee headed by Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) in the present Congress held further hearings and reported out the present bill, S. 1527. This bill is based in large part on the Auchincloss bill of the previous sessions, but embodies a number of improvements which add strength to the measure. It passed the Senate by overwhelming vote in May 1949, with heavy bipartisan support. Senators Kefauver (D., Tenn.) and Taft (R., Ohio) were the proponents of the bill for their respective parties on the floor. We have reason to believe that, when the bill reaches the floor of the House, a solid bipartisan majority will likewise vote for it.

Your Action Is Needed to Assure Passage of S. 1527. Despite the strong support local and national groups gave S. 1527 in the House District Committee after the bill passed the Senate, the House committee voted not to report out the bill. If this action of the committee is not now corrected by action of the whole House, Congress will have failed to relieve itself of a burden which is wholly unnecessary, undesirable, and contrary to sound government. Congress can no longer afford to carry the burden of acting as a municipal council for the District in the second half of the twentieth century. The present arrangement is wholly incompatible with the kind of organization which Congress must have if it is to meet its national and world-wide responsibilities during the years to come.

Passage of S. 1527 is therefore essential. We ask you to sign Discharge Petition No. 19 and to support the bill on the floor of the House. We ask this in the belief that passage of the Home Rule bill will be an important step forward in creating the stronger and more effective Congress the United States must have in order to meet the difficult problems that lie ahead.

PIN-WORMS
MAY BE A FAMILY AFFAIR

Fidgeting, nose-picking and a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms... ugly parasites that medical experts say infest one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, these pests must not only be killed, but killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do ... and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with this dangerous, highly contagious condition. At the first sign of Pin-Worms, ask your druggist for genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge... the small, easy-to-take tablets perfected by famous Dr. D. Jayne & Son, specialists in worm remedies for over 100 years.

house, the smoke inside was so dense they were unable to enter. They had to smash the first floor bedroom windows to gain entrance.

Three of the children were in a rear first-floor bedroom. John was in a front room on the first floor.

The parents managed to carry the unconscious forms from the burning house, where they were handed to others waiting outside.

Young George apparently had lifted the telephone from its hook to call for assistance, for when neighbors, on the same party line, tried to call the fire department they were unable because the line was open.

The couple have one other child, 9-year-old Charles, jr., who lives with an aunt, Mrs. George Deck of Baltimore.

Louis and Rose Margaret were dead on arrival at the hospital and the two other children died shortly afterward.

Stick In The Mud

It would be uncharitable to infer that the ignominious plight of the battleship Missouri has any symbolic connection with the recent shoaling of the Navy rebellion. If it had, the situation would indeed be desperate, for 21 tugs have failed to budge the only active American battlewagon from a mudbank in Chesapeake Bay, and the Navy has temporarily given up rescue attempts to await a favorable tide. Purely in a spirit of unification, we suggest that a certain airborne sister service might offer the use of some of its more gaseous claims as a means of lifting the Missouri.

Seriously, aside from the obvious question of how the Missouri happened to run aground in well-charted waters, there is the deeper question of what the Missouri is doing at all. It is almost universally acknowledged that the day of the battleship is over, and even ceremony hardly warrants the retention of so expensive a showpiece. It is just coincidence, of course, that Mr. Truman happens to be from Missouri. All the same, why not take the obvious cue and decommission the Missouri in favor of something useful, say, another aircraft carrier?

Private Pensions

The rapid spread of retirement plans negotiated under collective bargaining agreements between unions and employers is largely due to the meagerness of the pensions to which retired workers are entitled under the Federal old-age insurance system. Faced with pension demands imposing heavy costs on industry, many business leaders, formerly opposed to any liberalization of Federal benefits, now realize that it is to their advantage to support such demands.

The rapidly mounting cost of old-age-assistance programs involving additions to the local tax burdens of businessmen has also underlined the need for an expansion of Federal insurance coverage to provide pensions instead of handouts for workers in excluded occupational groups. With employers and unions alike urging action on liberalizing legislation, public opinion can be relied upon to support a program that would lay the foundation for a sound and comprehensive insurance system.

There are compelling reasons why the present trend to private pensions should be discouraged by strengthening the old-age insurance system. For, while private pensions may supplement, they can never be an adequate substitute for, social insurance financed by taxation. A few powerful unions have succeeded in obtaining generous supplementary pensions by bringing pressure to bear on employing companies. Some companies have also set up pension plans of their own initiative. But these plans benefit only a small minority of the country's 60 million workers. For example, it is estimated that only 4 million union members are covered by private old-age pension systems, and only 7 million by all types of private pension plans, both union- and company sponsored.

Testifying before the Senate Finance Committee Arthur J. Altmeyer, Commissioner for Social Security, said: "By their very nature these (private pension) plans are reserved for the relatively few who work for successful and generous employers or who belong to well-organized trade unions." And many of the favored few are enjoying a false sense of security. For the continuance of these plans depends on the financial capacity of the employer. If a company folds up, or if hard times force it to reduce payments or scrap its pension plan, the employe is out of luck. Moreover, under most private plans the pensioned employe loses his benefit rights when he changes his job. As a result, the free movement of labor is hampered and workers forfeit opportunities to better themselves by shifting to other employment.

Noncontributory private pension plans that saddle all the financial burden on employers also increase the danger of ultimate collapse of systems established by the financially weaker companies. They encourage workers to make excessive demands. They run counter to the basically sound principle of the contributory system, which recognizes an obligation on the part of workers to share the cost of providing for their old age. A pension for which the worker has helped to pay entitles him to claim his pension as a right. To quote the Ways and Means Committee, a pension of this type, relating benefits to the worker's own productive efforts, "prevents insecurity while preserving self-reliance and initiative." That holds true for private as well as governmental pension systems.

The pension plans that the big steel companies have agreed to introduce follow a pattern, calling for minimum pensions of $100 a month at age 65, after 25 years of service, with deductions of Social Security pension benefits. Under the formula, which has gained widespread acceptance, the cost of private pension systems will be reduced by any increases in the scale of Federal old-age pension payments. This linkage between the Federal system and private pension systems undoubtedly helps to account for the recent subsidence of employer opposition to increases in the scale of benefits under the Federal old-age-insurance system. That is all to the good. But it is unfortunate that employers did not see the light sooner. For union drives for generous pensions financed solely by the employer have been spurred by legislative inaction, encouraged by public apathy and hostility. If this dangerous trend is not halted, the public will be incited to demand pensions for all, based on arbitrary and excessively high standards of adequacy, unrelated to earnings, and financed by the Government instead of by joint contributions from employers and employes. To yield to such demands would destroy the sound principles of the Federal old-age-insurance system and wreck the country's economy.

After The Hiss Verdict

Alger Hiss had the misfortune of being tempted to betray his country in an era of widespread illusions about communism and of being tried for perjury in connection with his offense in a period of cold war when the pendulum of public sentiment had swung far in the other direction. That does not excuse him or minimize the enormity of the crime of which he has been convicted. But it may help to explain the mystery that still surrounds the case despite the jury's verdict. For now that a jury has found Mr. Hiss guilty of lying when he said that he did not pass State Department documents to Whittaker Chambers, former Communist agent, the question of what motives led an educated and intelligent public official to such misconduct looms larger than ever. It is difficult to believe that a man of Mr. Hiss' training and reputation could commit a similar offense in the climate of today's international politics.

Some doubts about the jury's finding are still being expressed, and some of Mr. Hiss' friends may never be convinced that he is guilty. There seems to be general agreement, however, that he was given a fair trial. While Judge Goddard admitted a good deal more testimony in the second trial than Judge Kaufman admitted in the first, this worked to the advantage of the defense as well as the prosecution. The court showed great leniency, for example, in admitting the highly derogatory testimony of Dr. Carl A. L. Binger, psychiatrist, against Mr. Chambers. But apparently it made no impression on the jury. So far as we have been able to observe, the judge's charge to the jury was eminently fair. A thorough and impartial trial is all that can be asked. It is desirable, of course, that the conduct of the case be scrutinized by a higher court to make sure that there has been no slip anywhere in the application of the law. When this has been done, common sense will dictate acceptance of the outcome whatever it may be.

The verdict is giving strong impetus to demands for new Communist hunts, and politicians are seeking to squeeze every ounce of political advantage from it. Of course, President Truman invited this sort of reaction by his thoughtless "red herring" comment when the case was in the developmental stages. But one "red herring" blunder should not lead to others. No generalized conclusions can be drawn from the fact that one official has proved unfaithful. If there are other cases in which Government employes have betrayed their trust, let each be handled in accord with the facts available. Nothing could be worse than use of the Hiss verdict to smear his friends on the guilt-by-association theory.

If Republican legislators carry out their threat to drag the case into the political arena, they will do a disservice to the whole Nation. For this is a time when we need cool heads and a unified people in resisting the intrigue, the spying, and the world revolutionary activity of imperial communism. Nothing could please the masters of the Kremlin more than to see Americans tearing their society apart in an internal feud. We hope that the people as a whole and the politicians in particular will have the good judgment to accept the findings of the jury and the courts and not make this or any possible similar conviction the cause for a Roman holiday.

Hearings On Genocide

A Senate Judiciary Subcommittee under the chairmanship of Senator Brien McMahon will commence hearings today on the United Nations Genocide Convention. At its Paris session in 1948, the United Nations General Assembly adopted, in no small measure as a result of American leadership, a convention establishing genocide as an international crime and inviting the ratification of all member nations. It defined genocide as a deliberate and systematic program to exterminate an ethnic group. Five nations—Australia, Norway, Ecuador, Iceland and Ethiopia—have already ratified the charter. In his latest message to Congress, President Truman repeated his recommendation that the United States be added to the roster.

Opposition to the genocide convention has come from elements of the American Bar Association. It is based, we think, upon a misconstruction of the convention's terms. The lawyers have conjured up a fear that because Negroes in the United States suffer from discrimination and are in rare cases the victims of lynchings, this country may be hailed before an international tribunal as a perpetrator of genocide. Discrimination against Negroes is an undeniably ugly fact of life in the United States. But it has nothing to do with genocide; it is not aimed at destruction of the colored race. Lynching is a hideous crime; but it is homicide, not genocide.

The plain truth is that the genocide convention has been attenuated to meet just the sort of legalistic objection that has come from the bar association and, as a result, is a great deal weaker than it should be. Nevertheless, it is a significant beginning toward the creation of a body of international law that will prescribe civilized standards for the world. There is certainly nothing in the practice or policy of the American people that could make them fearful of a treaty forbidding the mass killing of minorities on account of their race or religion or ethnic origin. This Nation ought to be among the first on record to stigmatize such conduct as criminal. It ought to assume leadership among those seeking to establish for the world an enduring law of nations.

George Orwell

Probably no other writer in English has had more to do with the belated divorce of the Communists and their fellow travelers of the Left than Eric Blair, known to his readers as George Orwell. Yet everything that he had to tell them concerning the true nature of the Communist revolution, and the sort of society that would result from its triumph, could have been found in the testimonies of other disillusioned literary revolutionaries, such as Gide, Malraux, Koestler and Silone. The decisive difference was that Orwell managed to convey the lesson in concrete visual terms.

Each of the others had in his own way discovered what happens when the principle that the end justifies the means is applied in the political order. The means become ends in themselves. Thus the Communist justification of the seizure and ruthless exercise of power for the sake of hastening the historical evolution of the classless society, and the sacrifice of one generation to the happiness of another, has been transformed in practice into a quest of power purely for its own sake. And once the seizure of power has been completed, the whole purpose of politics is to perpetuate it.

In Nineteen Eighty Four George Orwell showed his Leftist readers by what devices a dictatorship, having at its command all the resources of modern technology and psychology, can perpetuate its power, how easily it can extend its tyranny over both mind and body, and how readily it can detect and eradicate potential elements of rebellion or even of discontent, how the human race can be deprived of the very faculty of thought. He also showed them how little the ideologies of socialism, fascism, nazism and communism really have to do with the functions of a teleologically completed police dictatorship.

As a study of human nature under a police state Nineteen Eighty Four was far less subtle and imaginative than Man Is Strong, by the Italian novelist Corrado Alvaro, a work which got curiously little attention in the United States. Even as a work of literature Nineteen Eighty Four was somewhat inferior to Orwell's allegorical fable of the Russian Revolution, Animal Farm; or to his earlier memoirs of his life as a poverty-stricken dishwasher in Paris and as a tramp in London.

Another factor in Orwell's influence upon the Left is that throughout his own career, until his premature death last Saturday from tuberculosis, he managed to remain in his politics to the left of the Left. His final position appears to have been one of hopeless and defiant anarchism. His contempt for the working classes, or "proles," as he called them in his later novels, is undisguised. Apparently he considered them incapable of recognizing their true interests, or of pursuing them, if they had recognized them. He symbolized them in Animal Farm in the character of the farm horse, Boxer, whose strength and fidelity are so ingeniously exploited by the ruling coterie of pigs. But much as he might despise the "proles," Orwell considered himself one of them, and he remained faithful to their cause even when he despaired of it.

Bonus Clamor

It is indeed discouraging to see the American Veterans of World War II joining with the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the clamor for a bonus. Until recently the Amvets had resisted the demand for a gift to veterans. They were indubitably right. Congress already has provided handsomely for veterans in the necessary area of readjustment through the GI Bill of Rights, preferences in housing and various other ways. A general bonus would have nothing to do with pensions or other necessary compensation to men who were disabled. Instead, it would debase the whole quality of service by attempting to reward veterans for something that was the duty of every able-bodied citizen. In reality it would be outright class legislation, costing untold billions, and predicated on the political fact that veterans and their families make up a substantial portion of the voting population. This being the case, the gift would be illusory, for not only would veterans end by shouldering much of the burden themselves but their patriotism would be reduced to a dollars-and-cents proposition in the process.

Brazilian Coffee

Congressman Burnside of West Virginia is reported in large Brazilian headlines to have introduced a bill to provide technical assistance and a million dollars to help some areas of Southeastern Asia to produce coffee. The reports quote Burnside as announcing that the purpose of his bill is "to create a certain amount of competition for Brazilian coffee and to protect the American consumers."

Brazil is about the only American republic which never has quarreled with the United States and which entertains no pet grievance against the United States. Brazil is one of the few countries in the world which was a true and loyal ally in our two World Wars (unlike France, Italy or Southeastern Asia), and probably would be in any third.

Commercially, Brazil represents one of our most important markets, one which should have even greater importance in the future, when and if the Brazilians get some more dollars.

If Congressman Burnside wants to help the United States consumer as well as tested friends, he can spend that million dollars to increase Brazilian coffee production. Many Brazilians, discouraged over coffee prices that didn't cover the costs of production for many years, quit planting the stuff—that's why it's scarce and high today. While coffee prices stayed down, the cost of American-made tractors and implements jumped way up. The Brazilians made no demagogic protests against the United States. They made Sao Paulo the biggest industrial city in South America and one of the fastest-growing cities in the world. Brazilian coffee already has enough competition from Colombian, Arabian, Indonesian coffee, etc.

The possible harm done by Mr. Burnside in directing his bill against Brazil is far greater than any possible good it might do in Asia.

Indian Rights

With Congress reconvened, my people, the Pyramid Lake Paiute Indians of the Pyramid Lake Reservation in Nevada, will once more take up our vigil and plead with the Senators and Congressmen to defeat Senator McCarran's Senate Bill 17. This bill, which has been reported out of the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, would give white settlers title to certain lands within our reservation. These settlers are squatters who came illegally to our reservation, and whose only claim of title is the length of time they have been able to stay there. Senator McCarran has for many years tried to pass this legislation that would force us to sell a part of our land which is necessary for our livelihood and very existence.

We have carried our dispute with the white settlers and Senator McCarran's legislation to the United States Supreme Court, that granted us title to the land. We are now depending upon the Eighty-first Congress to protect our rights, as afforded us by the Supreme Court. We consider Senate Bill 17 a grave defiance to the Supreme Court.

We have appealed to the United Nations, and our case has been submitted to the Commission on Human Rights and to the Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and the Protection of Minorities.

We trust that members of Congress will recognize our human rights and prevent this discrimination against a minority, proving that justice prevails for all Americans alike.

"Payroll Padding"

The issues raised in your enlightening editorials on congressional payroll padding, and in "Congressman's Wife's" January 14 letter to the editor, go beyond the halls of Congress. The public trust is something apart and we cannot apply criteria which are often acceptable in private enterprise. Those who are charged with the public trust must be above reproach.

In private enterprise, nepotism is often practiced with outstanding results. However, in Government, for every good case of nepotism there is the case where a nonqualified relative is put on the payroll and personal enrichment at public expense results. Rather than risk another J. Parnell Thomas episode, Congress might better:

Prohibit the paid employment of any relative, even though this might mean a qualified congressional wife would have to work for nothing. Make mandatory the publication of name, address and salary of every congressional employe.

Adopt "Congressman's Wife's" suggestion that clerk hire be geared more realistically to the population in a Congressman's district. Set up uniform hiring standards for professional and clerical employes.

Return To Catholicism

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden's reasons for his rejection of His Holiness, Pope Pius XII's invitation to all Christians to return to the Roman Catholic Church (reported in your issue of January 16) is the saddest lament this side of the grave. True, this is a free, loving, God-fearing country with liberal freedom in religious thoughts, but God is God and His laws are His laws, and we as Christians accept His doctrine of the spirit.

His Holiness, Pope Pius XII, was merely carrying out the dictates of the "True Church" in attempting to bring men into the fold. Dr. Pruden is right when he says all men have been given the power to think freely for themselves—but woe to him who knows right from wrong and yet fails to heed the advice of Christ's living authority on earth.

I am a Seventh-day Adventist by choice and by conviction. If I should join the Catholic Church as requested by Pope Pius XII, would he accept me as a member in good and regular standing, allowing me to follow my own conscience in religious matters, or would I have to let him do my thinking for me?

As a minister ordained to preach the gospel, would he recognize my ordination and allow me to preach that people ought to observe the seventh day as holy time instead of the first day of the week? Would he allow me to preach baptism by immersion in place of sprinkling or pouring water on people? Would he allow me to teach as the Apostle Paul did, that "there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus"?

Symphony Conductor

There have been recent communications in your letters column in reference to the abilities of Howard Mitchell as conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra.

During the important Sustaining Fund Campaign for the Orchestra, it seems to me essential that the fullest appreciation of Mr. Mitchell's gifts as a musician should be brought to the fore. The greater the confidence the community has in the leadership of its orchestra, the greater the response will be to the current appeal.

I speak with conviction when I say that I believe the National Symphony Orchestra has never sounded better than it does this year under the leadership of Mr. Mitchell. The greatest orchestras of the world are heard via their recordings every day on the radio station with which I am connected. It gives us a standard of comparison. We have made recordings of the broadcast concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra which can take their place proudly with recordings made by the highly publicized orchestras of other cities.

It is important that every Washington music lover understand this: musical organizations, like governments and other man-made enterprises, run through the cycle of rise and fall. There is evidence to support my belief that the sun is shining on Washington's orchestra and that under Mr. Mitchell's baton, with the support of the citizens of metropolitan Washington, this orchestra has an opportunity over the years to become one of the greatest in the world.

Certainly no other city is a more fertile ground for such a development and certainly nowhere in this country is there a more truly American development than that of Mr. Mitchell's appointment as regular conductor of the orchestra. Never before in the history of our country has a great metropolitan orchestra chosen its leader from its own ranks.

The story is perfected by the facts that Mr. Mitchell is American-born and American-educated. His years of experience as a performer and as associate conductor of this very orchestra and his acknowledged gifts for making music are ample reason for giving him and the National Symphony complete support.

Let us not be confused by the glamour associated with the long-built-up reputations of visiting orchestras. The Boston Symphony, under its new conductor, played to a full house last week in Constitution Hall. The previous night the National Symphony played to perhaps two thirds capacity, but the Boston Orchestra, bigger in numbers and more experienced, gave an unworthy performance. Our own orchestra distinguished itself.

Washington has an opportunity to make musical history—we have an opportunity to see the growth of this orchestra under its conductor, and the most stimulating thought of all is that, given our backing, Mr. Mitchell cannot but become a greater musician as the years go by. This has been true of every great conductor.

Let us not import our culture. Let us create it.

Matter of Fact

What A Tangled Web

THE CURRENT ruckus about past events in China is a fine illustration of the familiar couplet: "Oh, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive."

Those who prepared the State Department white paper on China were too fearful of Congress to tell the China story with forthright frankness. Some, like the writers, have therefore tried to fill the gap in history by bringing out the suppressed facts. But the State Department has also been left open to all sorts of nonsensical and irrelevant charges.

A good example of this process is the recent thunderous claim by the learned Senator Homer Ferguson of Michigan, that all our China policy from 1944 onward was based on a secret, pro-Communist memorandum from Vice President Henry A. Wallace.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, a brief inspection of the Wallace memorandum shows that it does not substantiate Ferguson's charge. What the former Vice President was talking about, in his wooly way, was simply the need for thorough modernization and reconstruction of the Chinese National government. This was advocated, as indispensable, by every sensible supporter of aid to Chiang Kai-shek.

In the second place, Senator Ferguson does not appear to know about the other recommendation sent to President Roosevelt from China by the itinerant Wallace. This was a recommendation that the President recall Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell from his China command, and replace Stilwell with Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer. In short Wallace wanted Roosevelt to get rid of Generalissimo Chiang's bitterest enemy, in favor of the man who later became Chiang's friend.

This recommendation of Wallace's was of course not acted upon, any more than his memorandum was.

It clearly proves, however, that Wallace had not become the captive of the Communists in 1944. It also shows that Senator Ferguson has been talking through his hat.

The same strictures apply to the attempt, now going on in Congress and on the radio, to prove that there was some sort of pro-Communist plot in the State Department. There was no such plot. There were simply two competing and opposed views of China policy, both of them supported by very strong arguments.

One view was that of John Davies, jr., in wartime the chief political adviser of General Stilwell, and now a member of the State Department planning staff. Mainly because of the envenomed relations between Stilwell and Chiang Kai-shek, Davies early became convinced that the Chinese National government could never be reformed and strengthened.

It was always plain that Generalissimo Chiang's regime could not permanently survive without reform and improvement. If you started with Davies' asumption, therefore, it was also plain that the future in China belonged to the dynamic Chinese Communists. The Chinese Communists then wholly controlled their apparatus and their armies. They had been treated with contempt by the Kremlin. Davies astutely foresaw the possibility of Titoism when no Russian expert believed it possible.

DAVIES' POLICY was simply to promote Titoism in China, by offering American aid to the Chinese Communists, and thus rendering them still more independent of the Kremlin. It was a policy that involved heavy risks. But it was also a perfectly respectable policy. It looks far shrewder today than it did when Davies proposed it. It would certainly have been infinitely better to try Davies' policy, than to have no policy at all.

The real history of the loss of China can be briefly summed up. General Stilwell grossly mismanaged affairs there. One way to overcome the effects of this mismanagement was to adopt the Davies policy. But when General Stilwell was dismissed, the Davies policy ceased to be feasible. This left only the alternative policy, which was always the safer policy in the opinion of the writers. This was to attempt in China, on an even larger scale, the same sort of operation we have now successfully completed in Greece.

Unfortunately, this alternative policy was also rejected. There were many reasons for its rejection, ranging from the anti-Chiang prejudices still surviving in the State Department, all the way to the effects on Gen. George C. Marshall of his friend Stilwell's China experiences. To General Mashall in fact belongs the ultimate responsibility for our falling between two stools in China. That we did so was tragic but not sinister, mistaken but not mysterious. The State Department would have done better, in short, to tell the truth and shame the devil.

Party Hours

I hope to enlist your aid in a campaign for earlier hours for evening parties. I believe we would have the cooperation of even the energetic teen-agers who dislike waiting until 10 o'clock to set forth for their evening fun.

We parents of young people agree that late hours are in part responsible for the many accidents, hangovers and general illness that so often follow.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Misery Of Asia

FOR AN understanding of the difference between the Communist and the American approach to Asia, there are two documents which seem to me particularly enlightening. The one is the celebrated address made by Stalin nearly four years ago in which he announced the fourth of the Soviet Union's Five Year Plans.

Lippmann

The other is the report made last month by the United Nations Commission in the Middle East, of which Mr. Gordon Clapp is the chairman.

Both documents deal with the same fundamental situation, which Secretary Acheson described the other day by saying that "resignation is no longer the typical emotion of Asia. It has given way to . . . a real sense of anger . . . against the acceptance of misery and poverty as the normal condition of life."

ALTHOUGH Stalin was talking only about Russia, it is quite evident that he was addressing all the peoples of Asia. He was saying that Russia is an Asiatic country, that it too was feeble, miserable, underdeveloped and technologically backward. Yet in some "13 years" of revolutionary reconstruction, the Communists had brought about such a "transformation . . . from an agrarian to an industrial country" that the Soviet Union was able to withstand—largely by its own efforts—the main mass of the mighty German army.

We should merely be deluding ourselves if we refuse to recognize the tremendous force of this—the central theme of the Communist propaganda in Asia. Stalin developed the argument in his speech by pointing out that "the Soviet method radically differs from the capitalist method of industrialization" . . . which "usually starts with light industry" and then requires "a long period of time, several decades" before "a gradual transfer of accumulated capital into heavy industry starts." But in Russia, he said, "the Communist Party reversed the usual path of industrialization . . . and began with the development of heavy industry. This was very hard but not impossible to achieve."

THE ISSUE becomes clearly defined when we realize that Stalin does not pretend that Russian industry is as advanced as American or that the Russian standard of life is comparable with the American. What he does say is that by the Communist method a backward country like Russia has been transformed into a great industrial power much faster than it would have been under the normal capitalistic method.

He was saying, and the effective Communists in Asia are all saying it now, that though the Communist method is hard, it is quick and dramatic. That is a formidable argument in Asia, especially when it is backed by the undeniable military achievements of the Red Army, and when it is addressed to people who have never known much of liberty as we experience it, and nothing of democracy as we practice it.

THE CLAPP report, though it deals specifically only with a few small Arab countries, contains the essential Western answer. It is a deeply considered and perfectly honest statement. Mr. Clapp does not deny that the development, which we can promote, is much slower and much less dramatic. What he says about the Arab countries would have to be said in general of all of Asia—that "the region is not ready, the projects are not ready, the people and governments are not ready for large-scale developments." In the Middle East, for example, he found that great projects for the development of international river valleys—such as the Jordan—must wait on international agreements that no one can now impose, and on international cooperation which the existing governments reject. In the face of these obstacles, and bearing in mind the technological backwardness of the people, Mr. Clapp concludes that the only useful way to begin is with certain small "pilot projects," each within the borders of a separate state, none requiring extraordinary administrative capacity or the large investment of capital.

The scale is small and the tempo is slow. In countries like India and Pakistan, which are more advanced than the Arab countries, the scale can be bigger and the tempo faster. But nevertheless the scale and tempo of development cannot be what it is in Russia. Why? Not because the Pakistanis and the Indians are technically more backward. Far from it. It is because the scale and tempo of the Soviet development requires a dictatorship and a totalitarian discipline reaching down into every family and to every individual. A rapid industrialization of Asia could be carried out as it has been in Russia only by a government so powerful that it can compel the living generation to sacrifice its own hopes and advantages in order to build a powerful state in the next generation.

IN SOUTHERN Asia the existing governments have been brought into being by men who fought for national independence by enlisting massive popular support. The crucial question now is whether, despite the enormous difficulties of popular government, they can make enough visible improvement in the popular condition of life to retain their popular support. As long as they are not fully authoritarian, as long as they depend primarily on popular support, they cannot make a rapid and dramatic transformation of their economic order. Yet if they do not obtain results rapidly enough, the popular discontent with the results of popular rule may cause the people to turn to the totalitarian system.

There, I believe, is the hard core of the issue between the Communist and Western approach to the poverty and misery of Asia.

Hiss Counsel Goes to Work On Appeal

New York, Jan. 22 (NYHT).—With Alger Hiss in seclusion, his attorneys began working today on plans to appeal his conviction Saturday on two counts of perjury in connection with the passing of secret State Department papers to the Communist underground.

Claude B. Cross, chief defense counsel, said at his Brookline, Mass., home tonight he would appeal to the United States Court of Appeals immediately after his client is sentenced in United States District Court Wednesday.

Hiss faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and $2000 fine on each count.

Hiss and his wife, it was learned, spent last night at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Buttenweiser, at 17 East Seventy-third st. Mrs. Buttenweiser is an attorney and niece of U. S. Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.). Her husband is assistant United States high commissioner for Germany. By telephone tonight, Mrs. Buttenwieser said the Hisses were in New York but added she was sure Hiss had "nothing to say to the press."

Cross would not say on what grounds the appeal would be made but indicated he would ask Judge Henry W. Goddard to set aside the verdict on Wednesday. An appeal generally means an automatic stay of execution and it is expected Hiss will remain at liberty until the appeal is decided.

Asked if he would take the case to the Supreme Court if the Court of Appeals upholds the verdict, Cross said: "We'll cross that bridge when we come to it."

and for higher levies on corporation income and on estates and gifts.

There might be a suggestion for some easement of taxes on certain smaller corporations.

Lawmakers who attended Friday's White House tax conference indicated the President wants a total tax increase of something less than one billion dollars. This would be far shy of the five-billion-dollar needed to balance next year's Federal budget.

They do not expect Mr. Truman to ask for any increase in levies on individual incom s.

But the message probably will suggest to Congress that it try to pick up some extra revenue by a crackdown on tax dodgers who do not report all their income and by closing loopholes in the law.

Probe of Charges Against Wallace To Reopen Today

The House Committee on Un-American Activities today will reopen its investigation of charges by radio commentator Fulton Lewis, jr., that former Vice President Henry A. Wallace cleared wartime shipments of atomic materials to Russia.

Wallace, who angrily denied the accusations, will be given a chance to testify Tuesday.

Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, wartime head of the Manhattan atomic bomb project, is expected to testify Wednesday.

Witnesses today will be Army and wartime Lend-Lease officials. They will be asked about the assertions of former Air Force Maj. George Racey Jordan that several uranium shipments moved to Russia in 1943 and 1944 over the Alaskan Lend-Lease pipeline.

GAS—From Page 1

Rep. Crosser Overcome

Commander Sweeny was not home.

Mrs. Sweeny told Montgomery County police that the coal-burning furnace in the house caused a fire last November, burning the first floor.

A new floor was installed, and Saturday, she said, a man was hired to clean the furnace. She said he apparently closed a draft that was supposed to be left open.

About 10 p. m., she said, she smelled coal gas, but did not believe it was serious. Shortly after midnight, yesterday morning, she was assisting Representative Crosser, who was ill, to a bathroom when she began to be overcome.

She said she made her way to the kitchen and collapsed on the floor. The daughter was asleep on a couch and had become unconscious there without her knowledge, she said. Representative Crosser became unconscious in his chair.

About 12:30 a. m., she said, she revived partially, managed to arouse the daughter, Isabelle, and the two were able to telephone Mr. and Mrs. Frank Glynn, who live across the street. The Glynns, Mrs. Sweeny said, came to her house, opened doors, called a physician and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad, which took Representative Crosser to the Naval Hospital.

Girl Model Is Sought In Robbing of Artists

Tokyo, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—A police search for "The Bosom," a 22-year-old model accused of robbing artists after posing for them in the nude, switched today to the Ikebukuro railway station area.

An informant told police that the model, Hatsu Kwaguchi, had been seen several times in the area. The informant said she was wearing an overcoat over a pink colored sweater when he spotted her.

Police said Miss Kwaguchi in the past has gained the confidence of artists for whom she has worked and then robbed their studios of money and valuables.

Eight to Receive Certificates From County Chamber

Eight apprentices will be given certificates of completion of their courses at the dinner meeting of the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce at 7 o'clock tonight at Prince Georges Golf and Country Club, Landover, Md.

The chamber also will hear Mrs. Marguerite Miller, manager of the State employment office for the county, and Dr. J. Allen Cook, professor of retail marketing at the University of Maryland College of Business and Public Administration.

The apprentices were trained under the national apprenticeship program of the Department of Labor, directed in the county by Louis I. Nemerofsky.

Greenhouse Pleases With 'Cello Recital

By Richard Ke ith

Bernard Greenhouse, rising young American cellist, was presented last evening at the National Gallery of Art.

Greenhouse is no stranger to Washington audiences. He has made numerous appearance here in the past few years, and, although his reputation may not yet have spread over the country, it certainly is made in this city.

His program included the Bach Solo Suite in E flat Major, the Sonata in F Minor by Jean Hure, and other works by Boccherini, Schumann, and Chopin.

The Bach solo suites sound good only when they are played absolutely in tune, without strain, and without undue fussiness; Greenhouse met all requirements last night. The two bourees were pure magic.

One must always sympathize with the cellist who seeks unhackneyed music to play; he often has to take inferior stuff. Such is the meandering sonata of Jean Hure. It is a musical "bouillabaise" of the ilk that post-Franck Frenchmen brewed for all occasions—large pieces of Wagner and Franck, with assorted bits of Borodin, Debussy, Saint-Saens, and others.

Much of the burden of the Hure sonata fell upon Anthony Makas, who proved himself an able pianist and accompanist.

At the Phillips Gallery yesterday afternoon, Alice Anderson, soprano, assisted by Louise Haydon, accompanist, gave a lecture-recital.

She discussed and sang songs from the glorious age of English music—the seventeenth century. This is the period when English musicians wrote English music to English words for Englishmen. Since the time of Purcell, British music has been largely dominated by continental idioms and practices. It is a shame that we hear so little music from this era.

Two things were outstanding about yesterday's recital. First, Miss Anderson has something that is almost unheard of among singers—a sound, scholarly knowledge of the historical background of the music. Second, she selected interesting, but unfamiliar, compositions. Although Dowland, Purcell and Handel were well represented, the audience was spared their usual well-worn contributions.

Miss Anderson does not have a great voice, but it is pleasant, and she sings with intelligence and insight.

recognition, but it is mandatory that he recognize one of them.

Rayburn on Saturday said he would give top priority to the foreign affairs measure as it had been before the House on October 10 and is the unfinished business under the House rules.

The speaker has the right under the 21-day rule to recognize only the chairman of a committee directly concerned for such a motion. If he should order the measure up for consideration on his own initiative — as "unfinished business"—it would be the first such action taken under the year-old 21-day rule, which the House refused Friday to repeal.

Plant Rail Strike, Idling 12,000, Ended

Pittsburgh, Jan. 22 (AP).—The railroad strike that idled some 12,000 workers at the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. ended early today.

Officials of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, whose 400 employes of the Monongahela Connecting Railroad quit work yesterday morning, announced the end of the walkout.

The line, a J. & L. subsidiary, serves the big steel plant as well as a number of associated small industries in the Pittsburgh area. Nearly 5000 employes of these plants also were idled by the strike. Including other employes of the railroad, a total of 20,000 workers were thrown out of work.

A union spokesman said the railroad agreed to reinstate a discharged conductor about whom the dispute centered. In addition, 14 out of 16 disputed time claims were settled in the agreement.

U. S. Steel Asks Pension Vote

New York, Jan. 22 (NYHT).—The United States Steel Corp. announced today that its pension agreement with the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) would cost an extra $67,500,000 a year and asked its stockholders to approve it. Unless the stockholders agree, declared Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board of directors, "another steel strike could be the consequence."

The total cost of the new pension and insurance plan would be 78 million dollars a year, Olds said, as compared with the company's present pension costs of $10,500,000.

The new plan is the result of a 42-day strike, which ended last November 11. Under the settlement, qualified workers will receive $100-a-month minimum pensions at 65 years of age, paid by the company and insurance benefits supported by equal payments of 2½ cents an hour by the company and each worker.

Proxy statements were mailed out to more than 240,000 stockholders, who will vote on the plan at a special meeting February 27.

Missing Ex-Wife Of Tin King Heir Found in Virginia

New York, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—The New York missing persons bureau was notified tonight that Juanita Patino, missing former wife of a Bolivian tin heir, had been found walking aimlessly along the outskirts of Fredericksburg, Va.

The beautiful 28-year-old Greenwich Village night club singer, who has been missing since January 15 when she disappeared from the Hotel Statler, has been taken to Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg, police said.

Her sister, Anita, who reported Juanita's absence, said she would fly to be with her sister Monday.

Juanita made news previously when she married Ramon Patino, nephew of the late Don Simon I. Patino, Bolivian tin king, whose fortune exceeded 300 million dollars.

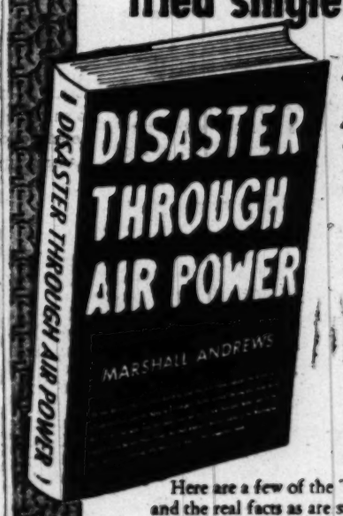
America is being sold a "bill of goods" which will cost billions and may destroy our security!

The U.S. Air Force's myth of an easy war to be won by an untried single weapon—The B-36



So says MARSHALL ANDREWS, a former army officer and present Washington authority on military affairs, as he reveals the grave danger to America of the policies and propaganda being rammed down the throats of Congress and the public by air power zealots: an easy war with the B-36.

Here is a coldly angry book, fully documented. It is a reply to the flood of propaganda which has been let loose to influence the people, Congress, and our Department of Defense.

In this book, the author shows that the airplane is a weapon—a powerful tactical weapon—vital to the success of any army or navy. But a successful war cannot be fought when the entire concept is built around a single weapon instead of a balanced military organization.

Here are a few of the "party line" claims made by the Air Power radicals, and the real facts as are stated and documented in DISASTER THROUGH AIR POWER:

AIR POWER PROPAGANDA	FACTS
Strategic air power alone won the last war.	The army won the European war with air support, the Navy defeated Japan with carrier planes as one of its major weapons.
Strategic bombing breaks the enemy and forces him to ask for peace.	We spent 50 billion dollars to prove that under strategic bombing production increased, civilian morale was hammered into fierce resistance, and the infantry finally had to fight its way through the rubble of bomb-blasted cities to defeat the enemy armies.
The Air Force wants unification of the armed services.	The air power vision is domination of the nation's armed forces. The Air Force itself has done more to prevent real unification than both the other services plus all the politicians in the country put together.

Also facts covering Air Force neglect of tactical air development, the plans against naval aviation, abandonment of our allies in western Europe, undermining of Army morale, the truth about the atomic bomb and countless other things which have been withheld from the public.

THE reason for this book—the reasons why you should read it—are best expressed by the author when he wrote, "The problem before the citizen is not simple because in facing it he has, not facts, but an incredibly voluminous propaganada at his disposal. But the citizen must face this problem and he must solve it because, in the end, he makes military policy and, through his representatives in Congress, decides what sort of military strength he is to have and how large it will be. There is no escape in wishful thinking; indeed there lies the greatest danger. Facts are available, and only when a sufficient number of citizens seek and find them can America and its allies be made safe against the new barbarians."

Redskins Get Dudley in Trade, Draft Justice

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IT WAS WITH understandable speed that the newly merged National-American Football League clubs dispatched most of their problems in Philadelphia over the weekend and put the circuit in order for the 1950 season. After four sagging seasons, they're all eager to return to the pleasant business of making money again.

The throat-cutting is at an end and the happy days when there were profits for most of the teams apparently are returning. The competitive bidding for players, which had been wrecking the bank balances, is no more, thanks to the merger which has made bowed the necks of the graduating college stars and given the club owners the whip hand.

POVICH

Bonuses for the players are out the window, and if they want to play pro football it is at the club owners' terms. But the wages are still attractive enough to have appeal for the college boys who couldn't trade in their diplomas for anything like the cash pro football offers.

The really luckless kids are those who weren't in their college backfields. The linemen continue to operate on a lower wage scale. It is significant that of the first draft choices of the 13 teams, eight were backs, two were centers, one an end, one guard, one tackle.

PRO FOOTBALL has gotten a distinct shot in the arm from the merger. Interest that was lagging in certain cities is bound to be stimulated by the presence of the Cleveland Browns, the San Francisco Forty-Niners and the Baltimore Colts in the new league.

The Browns have been the most fabulous team in pro football for the last four years, with their Otto Graham and Marion Motley and their great end, Mac Speedie. But they were myths to the fans of Washington, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Green Bay. Everywhere they play they'll help attendance.

And so will the Forty-Niners, with Frankie Albert quarterbacking the smartest T-formation in the business. They're a distinct drawing card. The Colts are not as exciting a football team, but in one sense they could be exciting to the rest of the league. That is their potential drawing power in Baltimore, the most-frenzied football town in the circuit.

FOR THE REDSKINS, the merger was a nick-of-time rescue. Crowds were falling off steadily in Washington and the attendance of 28,000 per game last season was a huge drop from what had been the average 35,000 capacity a few years before. Redskin season tickets were going begging compared to former years. Nothing could quite stimulate the sale of tickets like the prospect of seeing the Browns or Forty-Niners or Colts in action here.

And the Redskins may have come up with their smartest draft choice in years when they plucked George Thomas, of Oklahoma, out of the list. Teamed up with Bill Dudley, the Redskins figure to be improved in the backfield, at least. They haven't had a top running back since Andy Farkas and Dick Todd were in their primes, and the fans were getting bored with the incessant passing of Sammy Baugh.

Thomas is a shifty 185-pounder who can whack 'em down if necessary. For the past two seasons he has been the big gun in those good Oklahoma backfields, and what he can do with a football will represent a nice change of pace in the Redskins' offense that has been heavily-dominated by the passers.

THE MOST IMPROVED team in the new league could, of course, be the Detroit Lions, even as the Detroit Tigers are bulking as a threat in baseball. Coach Bo McMillin grabbed off the redoubtable Leon Hart of Notre Dame and Doak Walker of S.M.U. to bolster both his line and backfield in two swift and heavy strokes.

In Hart, the Lions came up with one of the finest ends in the history of pro football, a 240-pounder, who easily could be converted into a fullback and indeed alternated in that spot for the Irish. With such as Hart and Walker in the same backfield, the Lions not only are a drawing card but well might be a tremendous football team.

At Philadelphia, Coach Greasy Neale of the Eagles who already boasts the best backfield in the league, manifested his contentment on that score. When it came to making his first draft choice, Neale beckoned in the direction of Harry Grant, Minnesota end. The rest of the league could be painfully aware that Tommy Thompson has another guy to throw to.

Caps Drop Second in Row, 82-70, To Ft. Wayne

Special to The Washington Post

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 22.—Fort Wayne rolled to an easy 82-70 victory over the sagging Washington Capitols tonight before 3500.

Trailing only in the first period, which ended with the Caps in front by 26-21, the Pistons got going in the second period. They forged ahead on a goal by Johnny Oldham for a 28-27 advantage and increased their lead as the battle progressed.

Unable to hit from the field or drive through the tight Piston defense, the Caps fell 16 points in arrears midway the fourth quarter as Fort Wayne moved into a 75 to 59 lead.

After their slight deficit at the end of the first 12 minutes of play, Fort Wayne led at every turn. It was 38 to 35 at halftime and 60 to 50 as the National Basketball Association teams squared off for the last quarter.

The loss was Washington's second in as many evenings and brought their season's record to 19 wins against 21 defeats. Veteran Chick Reiser of the Caps bagged six field goals and four free throws to lead scorers with 16 points. Four Pistons were in double figures with Ken Carpenter's 14 points leading the winners.

George Mikan looped in 28 points as Minneapolis racked up its seventh victory in 18 home games. The 28-points licking was one of Chicago's worst this season, with Max Zaslofsky held to six points by Slater Martin of Minneapolis.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 22 (AP).—The Anderson Packers ruined the unbeaten home record of the league-leading Syracuse Nationals tonight with a 77 to 75 overtime victory over the Nats. The Nats had won 18 straight National Basketball Association games here prior to this setback.

Frankie Brian, leading the Packers with 19 points, tucked away the decision with two free throws six seconds from the end of the extra session.

Haas Takes Golf Lead, Fires 67-203

By Bob Myers

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 22 (AP).—Tall Freddie Haas, jr., one time king of the South's amateurs and now a touring professional, stroked into the lead of the $10,000 Long Beach open golf tournament at the three-quarter mark late today.

The youthful swinger from New Orleans shot his third successive sub par round, a 67 to follow a 70 and 66, and posted a 54-hole total of 203.

Playing in the last threesome of the day, Haas, winner of the Miami Open last December, forged in front of four challengers knotted at 204, one stroke behind the leader, with a 32-35-67 for the par 35-36—71 Lakewood Country Club.

Displaced was the midway mark leader, Young Jack Burke, jr., of White Plains, N. Y., who started the round one shot ahead of his nearest foe and two in front of Haas.

Burke, formerly of Houston, Tex., played with a swollen left hand and took a 72 for 206.

Trailing the pace also were such name players as Sam Snead, whose 71 gave him 209; Jimmy Demaret, with 71 for 207, matched by Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C.

Haas has a rough day ahead in the final 18 holes tomorrow.

One stroke behind him is National Open champion Cary Middlecoff, former National PGA champion Jim Ferrier, Canadian ace Stan Leonard and ex-National Public Links ruler Smiley Quick.

Two strokes away is Dave Douglas of Newark, Del., and 21-year-old Paul O'Leary of Bismarck, N. Dak.

And tied with Burke at 206 is another former PGA champion, Bob Hamilton of Landover, Md.

Middlecoff shot a 68 today, Ferrier 66, and Leonard and Quick each a 67.

'Wasted Choice'

No Pro Ball For Me, Says Justice Again

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

CHARLIE JUSTICE, drafted by the Redskins, last night reiterated that he will not play professional football.

Speaking from Chapel Hill, N. C., the great little All-America halfback from North Carolina said:

"I told Mr. Marshall (president of the Redskins) that when he called me earlier this month. I don't know why they drafted me after I told him I wasn't interested."

Justice revealed that Marshall had called him shortly after the North Carolina-Rice Cotton Bowl game and I made my position clear at that time.

"Seems to me they wasted a draft choice when they claimed me," he said.

The triple-threat Choo-Choo insisted that "nothing will make me change my mind. Frankly, I don't believe there's enough money in it for me. I've got a good job—a lifetime job—waiting for me when I finish school in June."

Justice has been engaged by the North Carolina Medical Foundation as a contact man for an annual salary of $8000. Part of his job is to solicit funds for the foundation.

"Besides, I think my luck has run out in football. I played for almost 11 years without getting hurt," he continued, "but I injured my ankle before the Notre Dame game last season and it hasn't healed yet. I figure it's time to quit now. I'm happy."

Asked if he would help Coach Carl Snavely with the Tar Heels' football practice, Justice said:

"If they want me to I'll be glad to help out."

Dan Sandifer Goes to Lions; Locals Also Pick LeBaron

Philadelphia, Jan. 22 (AP).—Detroit traded Halfback Bill Dudley, one of pro football's greatest ball carriers, to Washington today as coaches and owners probed for "sleepers" in the National-American Football League draft of college players.

Dudley, former Virginia All-American, went to the Redskins for Halfback Dan Sandifer, a blocking back. Nick Kerbawy, Detroit publicity director, said no cash was involved in the straight player swap.

The Redskins also grabbed the rights in today's draft to deal with two other well-publicized performers, North Carolina's Charley Justice and the College of the Pacific's Eddie LeBaron.

However, Justice, the Tar Heels' great two-time All-America halfback, repeatedly has said he would not play pro ball and has already arranged to accept a position with a North Carolina medical foundation. But the Redskins think they may change his mind. And LeBaron, although a flashy performer, is on the light side as pro players go.

George Preston Marshall, Washington owner, said he had wanted Dudley "for years." The 28-year-old ace from Blufield, Va., completed his sixth pro season last fall by breaking the Lions' scoring record with 81 points. He joined Detroit in 1947, coming from Pittsburgh in a four-player deal.

Saturday night the Redskins took George Thomas, fleet halfback of the unbeaten Oklahoma team for their first choice; another breakaway specialist, Notre Dame's Frank Spaniel, and Hall Haynes, Santa Clara powerhouse.

They also landed two linemen Saturday who may loom large in their plans, Harry Ulinski, captain and center of Kentucky, and Lou Karras, Purdue tackle.

Polly Riley's 295 Wins At Tampa by 5 Strokes

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Polly Riley, Fort Worth amateur, whipped the cream of the country's lady professionals to win the Tampa Women's Open Golf tournament by five strokes today.

Miss Riley came through with a final round 76 for a 72-hole total of 292.

Louise Suggs, women's open champion, shooting 73 today, wound up with an even 300 for second place. As top pro the little Georgian took first money of $1000 in the $3500 event.

Marlene Bauer, 15-year-old woman athlete of 1949, tied pro Betty Jameson at 302 for third place. Miss Bauer, from Midland, Tex., shot a 74 today.

Miss Jameson, from San Antonio, had a 73. Her second place among the pros paid $775.

Two strokes back at 304 was Babe Zaharias, with a 76 for the final 18. She won $650.

It was a well-deserved victory for Miss Riley, who came back from first-round bad luck to outsteady the veteran pros. She started out with a blazing 33 for the first nine and was on her way to a possible record round until she took eight on the par five eighteenth hole.

That gave her 72, second to Mrs. Zaharias' first-round 70. Par on the 6,093-yard Palma Ceia course

Knicks, Bullets Win in Garden Doubleheader

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Carl Braun, Ernie Vandeweghe and the New York Knickerbockers spoiled "Bob Davies Night" at Madison Square Garden tonight as the Knicks downed the Rochester Royals, 81-71, in a National Basketball Association game.

In the opening game of a twinbill, the Baltimore Bullets rolled to an easy 76-69 victory over the Sheboygan Redskins.

Before the Knick-Royal clash, Rochester and Jersey fans honored Davies, former Seton Hall great. First Seton Hall retired his old Number "11" and then admirers presented him with a Buick Roadmaster.

The former Seton Hall star had a comparatively bad night however, scoring four field goals and five fouls for 13 points. Braun tallied 23, Vandy 20 while Bobby Wanzer was high for the losers with 21.

Bombers' 2d Half Rally Routs Celtics

St. Louis, Jan. 22 (AP).—A third period surge gave the St. Louis Bombers a 71-47 verdict over the Boston Celtics in a National Basketball Association contest tonight before 3175 fans.

The Celtics just couldn't hit the basket. They took a grand total of 97 shots and missed all but 19.

Dudley Thinks He Will Boost Attendance at Redskins' Games

LYNCHBURG, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Billy Dudley, star halfback of the professional Detroit Lions, said at his home here tonight he "would like playing for the Washington Redskins."

Dudley was traded outright for Dan Sandifer, former Louisiana State back.

"It's all news to me," said Dudley, "but my contract with the Lions ended with the past season."

Dudley said the next move would be "up to George Marshall, owner of the Redskins. I am sure that my playing in the Washington lineup would help boost attendance at home games there."

The former Virginia All-America halfback added, however, that he was "not certain that I will play pro football next fall."

"I have several attractive business offers under consideration," he said, "and I may not be playing ball."

Local Talent Featured Tonight

Pat Thomas, Little Dynamite Head Fight Card at Turner's

Turner's Arena matchmaker, Gabe Menendez, starts a search for promising main event fighters for 1950 tonight with a card that boasts most of Washington's coming fighters.

Pat Thomas, beaten only once in 13 bouts, takes on Little Dynamite who had a string of 16 straight wins until decisioned by the more experienced Charlie Titone in his last outing. It stacks up as the best eight-rounder of the night.

Gene Smith, former amateur champ, makes his fourth professional start looking for his fourth straight knockout win when he takes on Jerry Kortwright in another eight.

Leon Daughtry local welterweight who has won 9 of 10 pro fights takes on Holly Mims and Marshall Clayton, former All-Army king, meets Marcelo Pacheco of Puerto Rico in other eights.

An all-local four-round preliminary pits Al Wright against Kid Wolfe.

Dynamite is a slight favorite over Thomas in spite of his loss to Titone, a fight in which his handlers admit he was outsmarted. They expect Dynamite to have gained a lot of "savvy" from the fight.

Eagles Protest Giants' Choice

Philadelphia, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles tonight protested to Commissioner Bert Bell of the National-American Football League over the New York Giants' draft of Ebert Van Buren, Louisiana State back.

The Eagles claim that young Van Buren, brother of Steve Van Buren, their backfield star, was not eligible for the draft. The Giants claim he was.

Cowell Upset By Tom's Auto

Tom's Auto upset previously unbeaten Myron Cowell, 34-24, last night to throw the Montgomery County Parks League lead into a three-way tie among Myron Cowell, Tom's Auto and Colesville, all with 5-1 records.

In other league games, the Elks Club nosed out Silver Spring AA, 33-31; Kensington edged Ig-Nor, 32-30; Colesville trounced GPO, 46-27, and VFW romped, 46-30, over Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad.

Unbeaten St. John's Routs St. Anthony's, 64-35, for 13 in Row

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks:

Down through the years, race fans have made pets of certain horses. Exterminator, Equipoise and War Admiral reached this status, although horses like Man O'War, Whirlaway and others, their ability not questioned, never seemed to assume strictly sentimental roles. The same might be said of Seabiscuit, although he had a big pull for him to win a Santa Anita Handicap, which he did finally. The current favorite is Calumet's Armed. He's 9 years old now and past the prime of stake horses. But he has a world of followers eager to see him regain prominence in the handicap division. He won his first comeback race in Florida and was beaten last weekend. Experts say, "He's over the hill." Perhaps he is, but that won't stop racegoers from trying to root him home. Forty-one days to Charles Town.

—Bill.

Little Hoyas Lose, 47-42, To DeMatha

Big Bill Mattingly tossed in 15 points as unbeaten St. John's ran away from St. Anthony's, 64-35, in a Catholic High league game yesterday at Catholic University for the Cadets' thirteenth straight win and their fifth in the league.

DeMatha nosed out Georgetown Prep, 47-42, in the first game of the doubleheader.

The Cadets were never seriously challenged. Coach Joey Gallagher used 11 men, with Mattingly and Center Bob MacDonald hitting for double figures to pace the rout. MacDonald got 12.

St. Anthony's little guard, Lou Pennini, shared the game's scoring honors with Mattingly with 15, but Lou didn't get much help.

Frank Fuqua, DeMatha's 6-foot-6 center, scored 20 points to pace DeMatha, while Dick McOwen had 14 for the Little Hoyas as they suffered their third defeat against no wins in league play.

Yank Trotter Wins

Paris, Jan. 22 (AP).—The American-bred trotter Scotch Fez today won the Prix d'Amerique trotting race at the Vincennes track. Scotch Fez is owned by E. Engblad of Sweden.

Shoe Clerk Ski Champ

Salisbury Mills, N. Y., Jan. 22 (AP). Torbjoeran Falkanger, 22-year-old shoe clerk from Norway, won the twenty-ninth annual Norseman Ski Club jump today with 207.4 points, although outjumped by the United States' Arthur Tokle.

Tokle had leaps of 162 and 174 feet. Falkanger jumped 153 feet on his first try down the 60 meter hill and then duplicated Tokle's 174 on the final leap to tie with the American for the longest jump of the day.

However, the Norwegian won on the better form.

Jumpers from Sweden and Finland also competed in the twenty-ninth annual jump. Because of the lack of snow, 250 tons of pulverized ice were blown on the hill during the night.

Redskins Get Dudley For Sandifer

nounced while the draft still was in progress. Most of the 1949 campus glamor boys were snapped up in the early rounds but there were a few surprises.

Sandifer, a graduate of Louisiana State, played with the old National Football League two years. He holds the NFL pass interception record. In 1948 Sandifer intercepted 13 passes good for 258 yards and two touchdowns.

Justice was not picked until the 16th round. Then Washington grabbed "Choo Choo" as the 200th man in the 390-player pool.

Washington area colleges made a substantial contribution to the draft pool. Maryland had three picked—Fullback Earl Roth by the Redskins, Center Jim Brasher by Cleveland, and End Fred Davis by Detroit.

George Washington's Half ck Stan Burak was selected by Pittsburgh.

The Redskins got around to Georgetown, too, naming End Bob Noppinger. The Hoyas' center, Vic Banonis, was selected by the Cardinals.

The Redskins also grabbed Ralph Shoaf, Virginia back. Green Bay took End Carlton Elliott of Virginia.

In addition to Justice, North Carolina contributed End Art Weiner to the Bulldogs and his running mate, Ken Powell, to Pittsburgh.

William and Mary proved popular. Halfback Jack Cloud went to Green Bay, Guard George Hughes to Pittsburgh, End Vito Ragazzo to the Cardinals, Back Frank O'Pella to Cleveland, and Guard Jim McDowell to Detroit.

Galiffa to Green Bay

Arnold Galiffa, Army's All-American quarterback, didn't come up until the 18th round with Green Bay selecting him. He probably will be too busy with the Army for pro football.

Jim (Froggy) Williams, Rice end, and Rod Franz, California tackle, both 1949 All-American choices, were ignored until the late rounds.

The San Francisco 49ers, grabbed off Williams in the twenty-third round of the draw while the Philadelphia Eagles selected Franz as their twenty-sixth choice.

California's celebrated quarterback, Bob Celeri, wasn't taken until the 10th round when the San Francisco 49ers selected him. On the same round, Washington picked Le Baron.

Michigan State's Lynn Chandnois, one of the most hotly pursued collegiate backs, went to Pittsburgh. All-American Center Clayt Tonnemaker of Minnesota, was snatched by Green Bay. Travis Tidwell, Auburn's fine T-quarterback, was grabbed by the New York Giants whon went heavily for backs.

Two members of Oklahoma's unbeaten eleven were grabbed in the first round last night—Thomas by Washington and Guard Stan West by Los Angeles.

Adrian Burk, Baylor's ace passer, was a somewhat surprising No. 1 choice by the Baltimore Colts, who had first chance at the pool because of their poor 1949 won-lost record.

Several of the 1949 college stars were not in the draft pool, having been selected last year when their original classes graduated. Few actually have signed. Draft rights merely give a club exclusive rights to dicker for their services.

Doak Walker, Southern Methodist's All-America halfback, was drafted by two clubs last year although he still had a year to go at SMU. By making a deal with Cleveland, Detroit retained title to the fabulous "Doaker," who may or may not play pro ball.

Emil (Six-Yard) Sitko, All-America fullback of Notre Dame's unbeaten national champs, also was in last year's pool. He was picked by two clubs but San Francisco won rights to deal with him by relinquishing Glenn Davis, famous halfback of Army's wartime teams, to the Los Angeles Rams.

Chandnois Deal Complicated

Leon Hart, voted the outstanding male athlete of '49 after his great work at end for Notre Dame, was given to Detroit by unanimous agreement before the draft started.

Pittsburgh's pick of Chandnois may bring complications. Under the original drafts of the All-America Conference and National Leagues before their December 9 merger, Cleveland and Washington had rights to the Michigan State player. Cleveland signed him to a $10,000 contract that also provides he shall play no place except Cleveland.

beams as he looks at the check for $50,000 cash he won in last year's DAV contest. It means a real future for him and his pretty young wife. Mr. Crissman says, "... the excitement alone was worth my contribution—even if I hadn't won!"

Mr. Crissman is a sales clerk, 28 years old. He earns $56 per week. His formal education ended in high school. In 1948, he entered the first DAV contest, did not do very well. But, he wouldn't quit trying . . . he entered the second DAV contest in 1949. His persistence paid off BIG! He won 1st prize in all 3 groups—a total of $50,000 in CASH!

Mr. and Mrs. Crissman live in a small bungalow in Baltimore, Md. They first will pay off the mortgage on their home. They want a family, which they can now well afford.

The DAV congratulates Mr. Crissman and the hundreds of other prize winners . . . and thanks sincerely all entrants whose efforts and contributions make these exciting contests and huge prizes possible.

Help Us To Help America's Disabled Veterans

The Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation invites YOU to enter its new 1950 Annual Puzzle Contest. It invites your support and offers you the opportunity to win a share of $100,000.00 in Cash Prizes.

The Trustees of the Foundation have allocated substantial sums to the DAV, for maintaining its nation-wide service to veterans, to advise and assist thousands of deserving handicapped veterans (and their dependents and widows and orphans) to become physically and vocationally adjusted to useful, self-sustaining civilian living.

Incorporated by special Act of Congress, the DAV needs these funds—and much more—to help rehabilitate America's 2,500,000 disabled war veterans—to help them to obtain needed claim evidence, service connections, medical care, hospitalization, vocational training and suitable employment.

It is for these services that the Foundation again solicits your support. Yes, your contribution is needed and you will be happy to know that every penny of the net proceeds of this contest (after paying for the prizes, advertising and all other necessary expenses) will be used by the Foundation and by the DAV to continue its work.

Act on this golden opportunity now. Read the Entry Form and read the rules. Then try your hand at solving the Official Puzzle printed here. Note that you may send in a higher score free of charge later on if you find you can improve on the solution you now send in. So there's really no reason to delay. The important thing is to get into the contest now and put in your bid for your share of the prizes. (See special prize for fast action featured above.)

THE OFFICIAL RULES—Please Read Carefully

1. $100,000.00 will be awarded in accordance with the instructions, official prize list and these rules to the contestants who achieve the highest scores in solving the Official Contest Puzzle. This sum will be awarded in three prize groups: Group No. 1 with a first prize of $5,000.00; Group No. 2 with a first prize of $15,000.00; Group No. 3 with a first prize of $30,000.00. Each group has an additional list of 333 prizes each, making a total of 1002 prizes in all. (See official list of prizes.)

2. To enter, a contestant must send with his answer a donation to the Disabled American Veterans Service Foundation. $2.00 is required to enter Group 1; $5.00 for Group 2 and $10.00 for Group 3. A contestant may compete in any one, two or all three prize groups and, after entering, may transfer from one group or groups to another (or others) by submitting the required additional donation prior to the deadline date shown in Rule 8.

3. Each prize group will be judged separately. The contestant who submits the highest valid score in Group 1 will be entitled to first prize in Group 1. Second prize in Group 1 will be awarded to the contestant with the second highest score submitted in that list and so on until the 334 prizes in Group 1 have been awarded. Prizes in Groups 2 and 3 will be awarded similarly.

4. In the event of ties in any group (which seem likely, since this is a large national contest), as many prizes will be reserved in that group as there are tied contestants, before any prizes are awarded for lower scores. To break such ties these tied contestants will be required to send in solutions to a series of five tie-breaking puzzles. The solutions to puzzle No. 1 in this tie-breaking series will be judged first. If this is not sufficient to break all ties and permit awarding of all the tied-for prizes, then the solutions to puzzle No. 2 submitted by the remaining tied contestants will be judged. If ties still remain, the solutions of the still tied contestants to puzzle No. 3 will then be judged and so on, if necessary, to puzzle No. 5. This may mean that puzzles Nos. 2 to 5 may not have to be judged. (It is worth noting that in the two previous DAV Service Foundation Contests first prizes of $33,000 and $50,000 were awarded in each case as the result of judging only puzzle No. 1 in the first tie-breaking series.) However, if further needed to break ties a second, third or even a fourth series may be used. All tie-breaking puzzles will be similar to the original puzzle with clearly identifiable objects, though the objects will be more difficult and more numerous. Partial credit may be given for partial solutions. Tie-breaker puzzles will be judged on a similar basis as the original puzzle. The time limit for solving and mailing back the first series of tie-breaking puzzles (if needed) will be not less than 14 days from the date of mailing to tied contestants, and therefore all tie-breaker puzzles will be released in the mails on a schedule so timed that they should arrive on the same day for each tied contestant; and for the second, third and fourth series (if needed) not less than 3 days each will be allowed. Tied contestants will not be required to make any additional contributions. Should final ties remain after the fourth series of tie-breaking puzzles, each tied contestant will receive the amount of the prize for which he or she is still tied.

5. The contest is open to any resident of the Continental United States except employees of the DAV and its subsidiary units, the DAV Service Foundation, its advertising agency, its service organization, or members of their families. Also excluded is anyone who has won $500.00 or more in cash or kind awarded in any other contest prior to entering this contest, or any member of his or her family. Every possible precaution will be taken to enforce this provision. Only one member of a family may compete. All entries must bear a bonafide permanent home address in the Continental United States to which all contest mail will be sent. Where a contestant changes such permanent home address, the DAV Service Foundation should be notified immediately. The Foundation can, in no case, assume responsibility for delivery of mail. In view of the uncertain address of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, and the consequent delay in mail delivery, this contest of necessity is not open to them.

6. Each contestant will be mailed an acknowledgment and an entry number upon receipt of his or her solution to the Official Puzzle, which solution must be submitted on an Official Entry Form and must be accompanied by a contribution of $2.00 or more. At no extra cost, one substitute solution can be submitted on the Official Substitute Solution Form which will be sent to each contestant and which will carry the entry number registered in the contestant's name. In working out and submitting puzzle solutions, contestants must follow the instructions accompanying the puzzle. Neatness does not count, but unsigned or illegible entries, or entries so unclear as to be confusing, will not be considered, and donations accompanying such entries will be returned upon request after judging is completed. Where more than one entry is submitted by an individual his or her highest valid score will be considered only in that group or groups in which that score is entered. That score will serve to compete in any one, two or all three prize groups, depending on the amount donated with that particular entry. An individual may win one prize in each prize group.

7. In solving the puzzle, practically any word that fits may be used. A contestant will not receive more points than claimed nor more than earned. Therefore, please use care in totalling your score. Do not use any hyphenated word or form, prefix, suffix or combining form, abbreviation or contraction. The final word source authority for this contest will be the Merriam-Webster New International Dictionary, Unabridged, Second Edition (any printing from 1947 through '50) and (with the exceptions noted) any word may be used provided it actually, completely appears in bold-face type anywhere on any page within the A-Z main alphabetical section of the above dictionary. No plural or other inflectional form is acceptable unless it appears in bold-face type. No word that appears only as part of a two or more word phrase or expression (such as "suey" in "chop suey") is admissible. The names and definitions of the objects are also covered by this entire rule.

The DAV Service Foundation will not enter into any individual correspondence concerning the eligibility of any word for use in solving the puzzle. But the failure of any contestant, after request by the DAV Service Foundation, properly to identify the page-source of a questioned word, may make said word inadmissible.

8. All entries must be sent by mail to:
DAV SERVICE FOUNDATION
$100,000.00 3rd Annual Puzzle Contest
Washington 6, D. C.
and must be postmarked before midnight, May 1, 1950, and received before 5 P. M., May 15, 1950, to be eligible for consideration. However, an extra 60 days from these dates is allowed for the mailing and receipt of substitute solutions and additional donations to transfer from one group or groups to another group or groups. The DAV Service Foundation will not be responsible for lost or delayed communications or for clerical or mechanical errors and each contestant by the act of sending in an entry agrees to be bound by the rules and instructions and, in any event, with the decision of the DAV Service Foundation and/or its Committee on Awards on any and all matters affecting the contest.

9. Any contestant who accepts help of any kind from any one (same family or household excepted) will be disqualified. Sworn statements to this effect will be required from all winners and every reasonable effort will be made to enforce this rule.

JUST FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE INSTRUCTIONS

1. Identify the six objects at the top of the puzzle. (The name of each object is a six-letter word. There are therefore 36 letters in the six names.) In so doing you must use only 16 different letters of the alphabet in the 36 letters you use (10 letters of the 26 in the alphabet not being used).

2. See the table of letter values below the puzzle. Each letter is worth a certain number of points. If you have exactly named the objects as instructed you will find that the total value of the 36 letters that spell out the six names of the objects is 931 points. If you don't arrive at 931 points then try again, for the 36 letters (comprising 16 different letters of the alphabet) must add up to 931 points.

3. Now your job is to place these six words, correctly spelled, into the shaded letter paths, each of which has space for six letters. You can place any one of the six words in any one of the shaded paths. Each word must read from top to bottom or left to right.

4. You will now note there are 13 empty white squares remaining in the diagram. Now you must insert letters of your own choosing into those 13 white squares and by combining these letters with the interlocking letters you have already filled into the grey squares, spell out 5 extra, different, complete words. Each of these 5 extra words, too, must read from top to bottom or from left to right.

5. Of course, it is easy to fill in 13 extra letters which in combination with the letters in the grey squares will spell out 5 extra different words (a total of 11 differently spelled words), but remember your job is to use 13 letters that will give you a high score when the value of those extra letters (as shown in the table of letter values) is added to the 931 points you will have already earned if you identified the pictured objects correctly.

SEE SAMPLE PUZZLE BELOW
And Read How We Solved It!

We have worked out here a typical puzzle to show you how to go about solving DAVogram puzzles of this kind, and we have also worked out alternate answers to get higher scores. Read below, then try your skill on the Official Puzzle.

First, we identified the objects pictured: DONKEY . . . BASKET . . . HANGER . . . ROCKER . . . and then we added up the value of all the letters in the names of these four objects (using the table of letter values given for the Official Puzzle) and found the total was 574 points. Next, as you can see in the first diagram, we filled in these four names in the four shaded paths and then added 10 extra letters which gave us three extra words: ROBIN . . . RACKET . . . SHOOT . . . These 10 extra letters which we had filled into the white squares had a total value of 230 points, thus giving us a total score of 804 points when added to the letters we had filled into the shaded squares.

We felt we could do better by a little further work, so with some thought we changed our 10 extra letters and got three different extra words, as you can see in Diagram No. 2. We changed ROBIN to DOZEN, RACKET to RESIST and SHOOT to SPOOL. We thus attained a total of 251 points for the 10 extra letters we filled into the white spaces, giving ourselves a total score of 825 points.

Of course these are only two possible solutions and perhaps we might have done even better by shuffling the four identified names around into different shaded letter paths. Now, if you get the idea, why not try your hand at the Official Puzzle.

Staff Cut Coming Up In Army Corps Working On VA Hospital Program

The Army's Engineer Corps will make a big reduction in its staff working on the Veterans' Administration Hospital program here. The President's budget provides a slash from 820 to 399 employes.

However, a bill is before the House Rules Committee to allow VA to construct 16,000 additional hospital beds. If it's approved and money is provided for the new program, the reduction will be postponed. In addition, VA will need several thousand additional employes to man its hospitals.

NACA: Congress last year approved a bill to allow the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics to pay 10 of its top scientists salaries up to $15,000 a year.

The agency has been most conservative in administering the law. Only five employes have been given pay boosts under it. They are: John F. Victory, executive secretary, and John W. Crowley, jr., associate director of research, $14,000 each, and Dr. Henry Reid, chief of its Langley (Va.) center; Smith J. DeFrance, director of its Ames (Calif.) branch, and Dr. Edward Sharp, chief of its Cleveland laboratory, $13,000 each.

A surprised member of Congress who read the NACA report on the pay law commented: "That agency deserves a medal. We thought they'd be demanding more $15,000 jobs by this time."

STORY: Representative Jimmy Morrison (D., La.), the ranking member of the House Civil Service Committee, likes to tell this story:

During one of his campaigns, an old fellow came up to him and said: "Morrison, I have one of those terrible problems . . . Why do they want me to be a polar bear? . . . I don't even know what a polar bear is."

"Why, a polar bear," said Morrison, trying to be helpful, "is a big white animal that lives up in the Arctic Circle and eats fish."

"Morrison," the old man said, "you don't know a darn thing. My cousin died and they asked me to be a polar bear."

OIT: More than 100 employes of Commerce's Office of International Trade here will be fired on February 15. They are insisting on jobs in Census and other expanding Commerce agencies . . . Geoffrey May, formerly of the Budget Bureau, is en route to Turkey to advise that government on a social security system . . . Representative Walsh (D., Ind.) is sponsoring a bill to require Civil Service to transfer laid off career employes to vacancies in other agencies . . . VA: The Veterans' Administration is discarding its old records by the ton. Within the next five years its officials estimate that records to fill more than 100,000 five-drawer file cases will have been destroyed.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will announce exams soon for: traffic and transportation specialist, transportation rate auditor, public utilities rate examiner, communications rate or tariff examiner, and passenger tariff examiner. The jobs, located here, pay from $3100 to $6400 to start . . . A register of 4200 persons who passed the recent tests for historian, intelligence specialist, foreign affairs officer, and social science analyst has been set up by Civil Service. About 4400 flunked the tests.

Civil Service has authorized the Bureau of Indian Affairs to hire 50 doctors and 150 nurses on the spot and without written tests. The medical jobs pays from $5400 to $10,000; nurses, from $3100 . . . Research-minded college engineering and science seniors will be given an opportunity for jobs in the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics in Civil Service exams to be announced soon. The jobs pay $3100 to start . . . Another exam coming up early next month will give high school graduates a chance for student nurse jobs at St. Elizabeths Hospital here. The students will get $752 annually, plus quarters, subsistence, laundry, etc. . . . Another new test coming up will be for Rural Electrification engineers, $4600 to $5400.

Baby Dies After Mother Scalds Him

Mentally Distressed Woman Plunges From Third Floor

A 19-day-old boy died yesterday at Freedmen's Hospital from burns after his mentally distressed mother coated him with oil, mercurochrome, shoe polish and scalding water.

The mother was in serious condition at Gallinger Hospital after jumping from the family's third-floor apartment following the scalding.

It was reported Mrs. Evangeline Wong gave birth to a son 19 days ago, and since then has been under treatment for mental strain.

About 3 a. m., police said, in the family apartment on the third floor at 1763 U st. nw., the mother rubbed the baby's entire body, first with oil of wintergreen, then with mercurochrome, and finally with shoe polish. Then, they said, she placed the infant in a pan in the bathtub and turned on hot water.

Next, police said, Mrs. Wong began throwing things about the apartment, and out the window. A neighbor notified the apartment manager, who went to the quarters. As he opened the door, police said, Mrs. Wong climbed to a windowsill.

Aware of her condition, the manager left to summon aid, police said, and when he returned, Mrs. Wong had jumped or fallen out the window. She landed in a concrete-paved areaway, 40 feet below.

She was taken to Freedmen's Hospital and given emergency treatment for possible fractures of both ankles and her back. She was later transferred to Gallinger for mental observation.

The woman's husband, Kim Wong, was at work in a restaurant at the time.

Theft Suspect Identified by Beaten Victim

A 6-foot holdup man was charged with robbery last night after his victim sat up in his hospital bed and identified him as the man who beat him into unconsciousness and robbed him of $88 Saturday night.

Joseph Puglisi, 73, who lives at 820 8th st. nw., told police a man entered his delicatessen store at 73 H st. nw. about 5 p. m. Saturday, grabbed him by the neck, beat him with his free fist, then kicked him into unconsciousness as he lay on the floor.

On a tip, robbery squad detectives arrested Charles Jackson, 41, an unemployed cook who lives at 926 4th st. ne.

Police took Jackson to Emergency Hospital, where Puglisi identified him.

Jackson will be arraigned in Municipal Court at 10 a. m. today.

Marine Beaten Following Row in After-Hours Club

A Marine was in Bethesda Naval Hospital yesterday, seriously beaten with a blackjack, police said, after an argument in the Stagecrafters Club, an after-hours spot at 3d and E sts. nw.

The victim is Corp. Clyde C. Swann, 25, stationed at Quantico, Va.

Capt. Howard Covell of the 1st police precinct said he is making a thorough investigation.

Police said Swann was in the club with two other persons; an argument ensued. He left and took a cab to 13th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., where his car was parked.

Then a car drove up and two men emerged and beat Swann about the head and face with a blackjack, police said. A witness obtained the license number of the auto, which police said checked to an employe of the club. The car, found by police, contained a blackjack. The owner told police the car had been stolen.

45,883 Visit Austrian Art On Last Day

Philadelphia and Boston principally—are attempting to arrange for the show to make extra stops in their cities.

But National Gallery officials said there is little chance that the exhibition will return for a second Washington showing.

Much heralded, the show opened in Washington November 20 with 41,725 as an opening-day crowd. A week later, 43,795 persons toured the galleries set aside for the exhibition. That number stood as the record until yesterday.

There was much to see. In numbers, 129 paintings, 32 sculptures, two miniatures, six antiquities, eight ivories, 15 works of goldsmiths and silversmiths, 33 vessels of rock crystal and gems, arms and armor, tapestries.

The Cellini salt cellar was there, together with paintings by Rubens, Titian, Correggio, Velazquez, Vermeer and Rembrandt.

Nearly all the objets d'art were from the Kunststoristisches Museum in Vienna.

But during World War II, many of the items were hidden. Gen. George Patton's forces "rescued" the works from salt mines in Upper Austria.

Restored to the museum, transported to American, Washington was given the opportunity of seeing one of the finest art collections and seeing it first.

Four Injured In Head-on Road Crash

Four persons, including a Maryland State trooper, were injured in a head-on auto collision last night on the Washington-Baltimore blvd. near Beltsville, Md.

Maryland State police identified the injured trooper as W. J. Gibson, 29, of Catonsville, Md, attached to the Waterloo barracks. He was admitted to University Hospital in Baltimore with lacerations and a dislocated hip.

Occupants of the other vehicle, identified as Herbert S. Harris, 55, Baltimore, his wife, Madeline, and 7-year-old son, Herbert, jr., also were admitted to University Hospital.

Harris suffered a bruised forehead, and his wife a fractured right arm and laceration of the face and neck. His son was still unconscious several hours after being brought to the hospital.

Prince Georges County police at Marlboro reported that at about 6 p. m. an auto crashed into a light pole near Mellwood, Md. Five occupants were injured.

Taken to Casualty Hospital by the Marlboro Rescue Squad, they were identified as Reuben Honeycutt, 27, of 526 L st. nw., operator of the car, treated for cuts and bruises and released; Mary Lou Molden, 40, 1219 9th st. nw., admitted, possible fractured knee; Albert J. Brice, 44, 1219 9th st. nw., admitted, possible fractured hip; William Smith, 1218 9th st. nw., released, cuts and bruises, and William Carter, 22, 1218 9th st., admitted, laceration to eye.

Kefauver Offers $25 Reward for Children's Puppy

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) put aside affairs of state yesterday to join in the search for a little yellow pup, a Christmas gift to his three children, Eleanor, 8; David, 4, and Diane, 2.

The dog, a 4-months-old female cocker, wandered away from the Kefauver home, 4848 Upton st. nw., Saturday afternoon, and has been missing ever since, the Senator said last night.

"The kids are heartbroken, and I won't get any peace until it's found," he added. He offered a reward of $25 for return of the puppy.

Montgomery Cabbies Ask Pickup Rights

Seek to Enter Prince Georges For Passengers

Silver Spring taxi operators yesterday petitioned the Prince Georges County Commissioners to lift the ban against entering Prince Georges County to pick up passengers.

In a lengthy petition, Lee W. Jones, Carroll A. Burch and Guy L. Jones, operators of the Silver Spring Cab Company at 7825 Eastern ave., point out that for 17 years they have been answering calls to pick up passengers in the section of Prince Georges County around Takoma Park and Hampshire Knolls and transporting passengers back into Montgomery County. The 38 cabs of the company are radio equipped and do not "cruise" in Prince Georges, they point out.

The company cannot comply with Prince Georges County requirements and obtaining a license in the county would be too expensive, they also declare.

Montgomery County and the District of Columbia have a reciprocal agreement whereby cabs can go into the other's jurisdiction to pick up and deliver passengers, the taxi owners point out.

They state that there is no taxi service in Prince Georges closer than Hyattsville to serve these sections and that the Hyattsville cabs frequently refer calls to the Silver Spring company as more expeditious.

Laborer Admits Alexandria Killing After Argument

Alexandria detectives said yesterday a 26-year-old maintenance worker has admitted firing the bullet that killed Walter Underwood during an Oronoco st. altercation early last Sunday.

James Boyd, 401 Princess st., according to Inspector Russell A. Hawes, confessed firing a single shot from a 22-caliber rifle at a group of men which included Underwood, shortly after he and Underwood had become involved in an argument at a private party at 518 Oronoco st. Boyd, who was arrested Saturday night, told police the argument developed over a "borrowed pencil," Hawes said.

He is being held for investigation while detectives try to clear up "some other angles of the shooting," according to the inspector.

Mercy Death Issue Aired By Minister

Society Must Face Question Honestly, Dr. Powell Davies Declares in Sermon

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Religion requires that society face the question of mercy killing "simply and honestly and not turn away from its realities," a Washington minister said yesterday.

Dr. Davies

Preaching at All Souls' Church (Unitarian), 16th and Harvard st. nw., the Rev. Dr. A. Powell Davies urged that society "relieve the medical profession of this dilemma."

Dr. Davies, who did not indorse any specific mercy killing proposal, said he believed in the principle and said it can have the sanction of religion.

"It is blasphemous to say that God intends that people shall linger in unbearable agony until they die of exhaustion," he declared.

"Whatever should be done, we should take it out of the area of concealment and furtiveness and provide for it honestly and openly," Dr. Davies said.

Dr. Hermann N. Sander, Manchester, N. H., physician now under indictment on a first-degree murder charge for the "mercy killing" of a dying cancer patient, has forced the issue, Dr. Davies said.

Dr. Davies, who said that the people are reluctant to face the issue, told his congregation he himself did not want to preach on the subject of mercy killing, but that it would be "cowardly to refuse."

He said the chief objection to euthanasia or mercy killing of the incurably ill is made in the name of religion by clergymen who quote over and over again the Sixth Commandment, or rather they misquote it."

He asserted that in the original language and in the Revised Version of the Bible, the Sixth Commandment is not "thou shalt not kill," which he called a "mistranslation," but "thou shalt do no murder." Murder, Dr. Davies said, is the "unlawful killing of a human being with malice aforethought."

Instead of malice, Dr. Davies continued, the physician who believes in euthanasia "feels compassion, and, far from acting from an evil motive, he forces himself to do a very difficult and repugnant thing from the highest of motives."

There is a danger that legalized mercy killing might lead to the kind of thing which happened in Hitler's Germany, Dr. Davies said, adding that "I think there is a risk, but I believe it is a risk we shall have to take.

"It should be made very difficult to take human life legally for any reason whatsoever," he said, urging "utmost safeguards."

Patricia Ann Carey Remains Unconscious

Eight-year-old Patricia Ann Carey, daughter of James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, remained unconscious yesterday for the seventeenth day since she was struck by an automobile at Sligo ave. and Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, Md.

The little girl's condition remains critical. She is at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md.

Speak of the Past? No Sirree! So Says Mrs. Doyle, 90 Today

Mrs. Mary Josephine Collins Doyle, one of Georgetown's oldest natives—if not the oldest—will celebrate her ninetieth birthday today.

Mrs. Doyle was born when Wisconsin ave. was "High Street," but will she talk about it? No sirree.

Her Irish gray eyes twinkling, she says, "I don't look back. I live in the present."

Of her past all she will say is, "I was just like any other girl," and "I had a mighty good time."

And of Georgetown—"They have made a lot of improvements."

Since 1946 she and her younger sister, Mrs. Isabelle R. Schnider, have lived at 3130 Dumbarton ave. nw.

But all the rest of her life was spent at 3016 O st., from which she did not move until after the death of her husband, John H. Doyle, civic and religious leader and sports lover.

Mrs. Doyle was born across the street from the O st. house—which her father, Joseph F. Collins, a Georgetown-born contractor, was building at the time. The Collins family had 11 children, of whom Mrs. Schneider and Mrs. Doyle are the only survivors.

Mrs. Doyle was educated at Visitation Convent, Frederick, Md., and was married at Holy Trinity Church January 19, 1881. Her husband's birthday was January 16, their wedding anniversary three days later, and her birthday four days later — so mid-January was practically like Christmas.

Mrs. Doyle has one surviving child, J. Herbert Doyle, 64, of Long Island, N. Y., one grandson, three granddaughters and five great-grandchildren.

Propeller Fails

Maryland U. Wind Tunnel Tests Halted

The Big Wind at the University of Maryland is expected to be blowing again shortly.

Disintegration of the seven blades of the 19-foot wood propeller in the university's $1,200,000 wind tunnel has seriously impeded experiments the past month but repairs are being moved rapidly, it was reported yesterday.

Tests were being made in the tunnel by the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, which works closely with the university in tunnel tests, when the giant propeller went to pieces under the strain of a speed of 750 revolutions per minute.

Metal Blades Obtained

Metal blades from Army surplus stores have been obtained to replace the wooden blades, and repairs to the damaged tunnel are nearly complete.

The reconstruction work is being performed largely by members of the tunnel staff, under supervision of A. Wiley Sherwood, tunnel manager and research professor of aerodynamics.

The tunnel, said to be the finest in the East, has been in operation more than six months and is part of the College of Engineering and Aeronautical Sciences. It was made possible by a $2,500,000 grant to the university made by Glenn L. Martin.

Tests Made For Navy

Nearly all the testing in the tunnel is contracted for by the Martin company and the Navy.

Professor Sherwood said that failure of the propeller, while the first accident at the university wind tunnel, is not an unusual occurrence in wind tunnel work. Approximately 2000 pounds of steel will be used in the repairs.

Fairfax Unit Organizes Religious Plan

Program to Replace Free-Time School Teaching in Area

The newly-organized Fairfax County Association of Churches yesterday approved a program which includes a plan of religious education to supplant "free time" religious classes formerly taught in the public schools.

Further investigation of a proposal to use a trailer-classroom to take religious education to county school children was authorized by the group, which met at Columbia Baptist Church, Falls Church.

It was revealed that a member of the association has designed a trailer seating 32 persons, which could be used for such classes. The "free time" program was discontinued last year on order of the county school board.

The Rev. William Archer Wright, jr., pastor of Merrifield and Chesterbrook Methodist Churches, president of the new association, said its formation in part stemmed from a need for greater religious education created by the school board's action.

The association, which is open to all Protestant churches in the county, has 31 members.

Its program, adopted at the meeting yesterday, also calls for greater emphasis on evangelism and interchurch activities and efforts to improve community relations. Committees to carry out each phase of the program will be established.

5 Detectives Hunt Warring, Scheve Robbers

Five detectives yesterday continued investigating recent racket-robberies of two District police characters.

The sleuths would not reveal whether their efforts are bringing them nearer to a solution of the two crimes which netted sums variously reported from $2000 to $100,000.

Neither robbery has been reported officially to police.

The first, that of Emmitt Warring, former numbers game operator, took place January 14, at his home, 3900 Massachusetts ave. Out-of-town hoodlums reportedly took $70,000 from him. Police Chief Robert J. Barrett, however, says the amount was nearer $20,000.

The second robbery victim was Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve. Local mobsters are reported to have "taken" him for $2000 the day after the Warring robbery. Scheve was convicted last April of running gambling games with his father, (Big Joe) Scheve. The latter was shot and killed in a 9th st. poolroom a couple of months ago.

Although neither victim has gone to police to report his loss, word of the robberies filtered into Police Headquarters from underworld sources.

Mrs. Caraway's Condition Called 'Slightly Worse'

Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, 71, former United States Senator, was reported slightly worse last night at George Washington University Hospital.

Her physician said the condition of the former Democratic Senator from Arkansas was not quite as good as the previous day.

"She seems to be getting a little weaker," he added.

Mrs. Caraway, whose home is in Jonesville, Ark., entered the hospital January 11. She suffered a stroke a few days later.

Dr. Gannon Criticizes Board Over School Post

Member Questions Action in Rejecting Miss McAuliffe as Principal at Sousa

Dr. James A. Gannon, member of the Board of Education, strongly criticized the board yesterday for "going beyond its powers" in rejecting School Supt. Hobart M. Corning's recommendation on the principalship of the Sousa Junior High School.

Dr. Corning named Miss Eleanor P. McAuliffe for the post. But the board last week rejected Miss McAuliffe by a 5 to 3 vote. Under law the board may either accept or reject the superintendent's nominations. It may not select a candidate itself.

"We hired Dr. Corning," Gannon declared, "to work these things out. We're here only to act as a policy-making body. We are not experts. What do we know about qualifications?"

Lee Led Opposition

Meantime, Board Member Adelbert W. Lee, who led the majority opposition to Miss McAuliffe's appointment, said he is "sure" a special meeting will be called to air the board's action.

Lee added: "I think all this has gone too far not to have another meeting."

Superintendent Corning today is scheduled to decide whether to resubmit Miss McAuliffe's name to the board. School Board President C. Melvin Sharpe said he will call a special session if three members request it.

Lee said he has been assured of the support of another board member for an "open meeting," and believes he can obtain a third backer for a special session.

Gannon said, "If Lee wants to give his side, he may call the press and they'll be glad to oblige him—if there is another side."

Assistance to a Lady

Lee yesterday repeated his charge that only a part of the qualifications of the three leading candidates has been released—and released improperly since it was confidential information.

Replied Gannon: "I don't know who released the information, but I congratulate him.

"He gave assistance to a lady in distress. Her long association and very good work deserve better treatment than Mr. Lee and his friends gave her.

"I'm glad her side has come out," he said.

This data showed that Miss McAuliffe, sister of Maj. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe of Bastogne fame, led the two other leading candidates in experience, training and efficiency. Miss McAuliffe is assistant principal of Paul Junior High.

Wants All the Facts

The other two candidates are Frank A. Stutz, assistant principal of Deal Junior High School, and John Koontz, assistant principal of Paul Junior High, whom Lee is known to favor.

Lee said that at any special meeting he would release "all the facts" concerning the qualifications, and would demand to know the source of the information already published.

He said he tried to divulge this material at the last board meeting and was ruled out of order—"properly so," he added—by President Sharpe.

"The fact is," Lee asserted," the board knew this other confidential information and five members were sufficiently unimpressed by the superintendent's presentation to vote against his recommendation."

Justice Hughes' Son Dead at 60 in N. Y.

Charles Evans Hughes, jr., 60, former United States Solicitor General and only son of the late Chief Justice, died Saturday night at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, New York City, after an operation for a brain tumor.

1937
Mr. Hughes

Mr. Hughes, a New York lawyer and senior member of the law firm of Hughes, Hubbard & Ewing, No. 1 Wall Street, served as Solicitor General from June 1, 1929, to the following April. He resigned because of the appointment of his father as Chief Justice of the United States.

Among the causes that led the elder Hughes to hesitate before accepting the appointment to the Supreme Court was the effect it would have on his son's Government career. President Hoover assured the father, that another position would be found for the son. But apparently there was nothing else that interested the younger man and he retired to private life.

Mr. Hughes was graduated from Brown University in 1909 with an A. B. degree. In 1937 he received an honorary doctorate from Brown and was made a Fellow. He attended the Harvard Law School and was editor of the Harvard Law Review in 1912. The following year he was admitted to the New York bar, and in 1914 became law secretary to the late Benjamin W. Cardozo, then justice of the New York Supreme Court and later a Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

During World War I, Mr. Hughes enlisted as a private in the Field Artillery. He served for a time under former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and was advanced to a captaincy.

Mr. Hughes is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marjory Bruce Stuart Hughes; two sons, Charles Evans Hughes 3d, of New York City, and Prof. Henry Stuart Hughes, a Harvard University faculty member; two daughters, Miss Helen Hughes, a student at Sarah Lawrence College, and Miss Marjory Bruce Hughes, a student at Vassar. Two sisters also survive him: Mrs. Chauncey L. Waddell of Riverdale-on-Hudson, New York City, and Mrs. William T. Gossett of Detroit.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday at Christ Church, Riverdale. Burial will be private. The family has requested that there be no flowers and that contributions be sent to the Brain Tumor Research Fund, Neurological Institute of New York.

Clergy Gives Genocide Pact Support

Senate ratification of the United Nations Convention on Genocide was urged yesterday by many clergymen at church services.

Hearings on the convention, which would make killing of national, racial or religious groups an international crime, will begin before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at 10 a. m. today.

Forty-three nations, including the United States, have signed the convention. Seven have ratified. Thirteen more must ratify to make it binding.

"I don't see how any human being with any moral sense or moral decency could not stand for provisions of the bill," the Rev. Seth R. Brooks declared at Universalist National Memorial Church, 1810 16th st. nw.

At Asbury Methodist Church, 11th and K sts. nw., the Rev. Dr. Robert M. Williams said he was "for the bill 100 percent," and declared that "the wholesale slaughter of people is not only uncivilized, but un-Christian and should be denounced by Christian people everywhere."

"The crime of genocide may be an old one with a new name, but in the lifetime of this generation we have seen it practiced on a scale that we would not have believed possible," the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn declared at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette sq.

"The conscience of the world will support every effort to expose and outlaw it," he said.

The Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, said that "every effort to outlaw genocide, in my judgment, is surely a Christian procedure. We need statesmen increasingly wise and strong enough to substitute every human process for such barbarism."

Jean Devau Dies; French Correspondent

Jean R. Devau, 41, Washington correspondent for France Presse, the French news agency, died Saturday night at Emergency Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Devau, who had been a Washington correspondent since 1946, was a reporter for Paris Soir in Rome before the war. He was expelled by the Fascist government of Italy and returned to France in 1939.

At the time of the declaration of war, Mr. Devau was a correspondent in Warsaw, Poland. He returned to France before the German invasion.

Mr. Devau's parents live in Bougie, Algeria. Arrangements for funeral services have not been completed.

In a statement issued after Mr. Devau's death, French Ambassador Henri Bonnet said that "the cause of Franco-American friendship has just suffered a great loss."

"To the accomplishment of his journalistic duties he brought both that faculty of understanding and that objective judgment which is the mark of a great nature and the devotion of the newspaperman conscious of his responsibility towards those he informed," the Ambassador said.

About People Hereabouts . . .

Bachelors Tumble, but Not the Old Durables

By Ellen Buell Parry

THE VEEP said the other day people seem to be "catching" marriage from him, sort of like youngsters catch the measles. And, of course, Cary Grant, Clark Gable and others DID follow suit after the amiable Kentuckian won the accomplished Missouri lady.

The current moonsickness need not be considered epidemic, however, until such heretofore immune bachelors as J. Edgar Hoover, Clyde Tolson, Coleman Jennings and Justice Richmond B. Keech let their defenses down.

The personable chief of the FBI has spent many years in Washington—all of them as a bachelor. Hostesses are able to rope him in now and then for dinner, but the quarry in all his serious pursuits are inevitably criminals—not marriageable chiquitas.

TOLSON, Hoover's top assistant and frequent lunch companion, like his boss still travels single saddle. Clyde came here 32 years ago from Iowa, soon became confidential assistant to the then Secretary of War. Administrations changed, Secretaries of War changed, but neither Clyde's marital status nor his job did—until he shifted to the FBI. And then only his job changed.

JENNINGS has a large town house, a country place near Great Falls, in Virginia, and he has places in California and England where he goes, come summertime. He was president of the Washington Community Chest for several years, twice campaign chairman. He is a vestryman at St. John's Episcopal Church at Lafayette Park. But when he marches down the aisle he has a collection plate in his hand, rather than a bride on his arm.

KEECH (United States District Court), a one-time executive assistant to President Truman, is well endowed with both charm and chattels. He has a city house, a beautiful farm, with saddle horses and all, at Potomac, where he rides with the Hunt. But when he rides with the Hunt, his eye is alert for foxes, rather than a fetter.

These mate-resistant eligibles all plead that they're romantic also-rans, which, of course, is so much vanilla. Until some of these old durables start taking strolls in the moonlight, we'll consider the present movement to the altar no more than monoliths on the undulating nuptial chart.

Until these topple, it's a rash, not an epidemic

IT WAS quite a party! The cook and butler served as the orchestra. A Justice of the Supreme Court called the numbers for the square dance. And the guests washed the dishes.

Mrs. John L. Blair who, with her husband, was in Washington last week, en route to Florida for a short visit with Justice and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, told us the story.

The Blairs, who live in Warren, Pa., had a couple working for them during the war as butler and cook. Mrs. Blair discovered, one day when the cook was dusting the piano that she couldn't resist fingering the keys and that she really could play. It developed that she had actually played with a well-known orchestra. Meanwhile, it turned out that the butler was a harmonica player.

Soon afterward the Blairs had the party. The Jacksons were visiting them. A guest suggested, after dinner, that the cook and butler be brought in to perform. Mrs. Blair protested that they had to do the dishes. "We'll do the dishes," said the men.

The cook and the butler strted to work on the piano and the harmonica. Some of the men started washing the dishes. The other guests started dancing. Justice Jackson asked if they would like to square dance, said he would call the numbers. And he did!

DONALD DOWNS has leased his beautiful estate Downscrest, on the Potomac River, near Chain Bridge, and is moving to Georgetown. Donald owns that fascinating Book Shop on P st., where one may get either a first edition or a best-seller. Over the book shop Donald has fixed up an attractive apartment, and he will "batch" it there for awhile.

JUSTICE JACKSON "CALLED" THE SQUARE DANCE
. . . while the cook and butler furnished the music

British Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Stephen Shoosmith have taken Downscrest, General Shoosmith (very young looking for that rank arrived in this country recently to replace General Gasoyne as Deputy Commander of the British Joint Services Mission. Downscrest is just a hop and a skip—or a short gallop (we understand the Shoosmiths hope to have horses) from Ranleigh, where General Morgan lives.

The Shoosmiths have a 10-year-old son and a 6-year-old daughter. The whole family preferred a home in the country, not too far from the city and official duties. Downscrest should be the answer.

EDWINA HORGAN, wife of the surgeon, Dr. Joseph Horgan has taken the train to her native Kentucky, there to join friends driving to, and all around, Old Mexico.

Edwina is the daughter of a former Kentucky Governor, the late Edwin Morrow. In her father's days of politicking, she introduced him at each stop on his speaking tours, put the voters in just the right mood to listen to and vote for dad.

Joe and Edwina have a beautiful farm, Craggwood, at Potomac, lots of horses and dogs. They ride regularly with the Potomac Hunt. Their other hobby is entertaining friends.

Edwina has been president of the Arts and Letters Society of Washington. She ended her term in June, after putting on that tremendous benefit the society gave at Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim's Firenze House, to provide scholarships for promising young artists and musicians. About twice as many people showed as had been anticipated and about twice as much money was made.

SPEAKING of a Governor reminds me that Mrs. Garland Pollard, widow of the Virginia Governor, recently took her cook from Richmond to visit the John Garland Pollards, jr., at their Belle Isle Farm on the Rappahannock.

The hostess went out to the kitchen a few days later and said to the visiting cook: "Rosa, don't you think this is God's country down here?"

"It must be God's country, Miss Peggy," the cook answered, "cause I sure ain't seen nobody else 'round here."

Famous Trio in Spotlight At Sunday Breakfast Fete

By Elizabeth Maguire

A FAMOUS trio figured prominently at a breakfast party given yesterday at the Army and Navy Country Club. Miss Margaret Truman, daughter of the President, was a guest; Miss Jane Lingo was hostess, and the guest of honor was Miss Drucie Snyder, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and bride-elect of Maj. John E. Horton. The three girls are long-time friends.

Miss Snyder and Major Horton will be married Thursday, January 26, at the Cathedral, and Miss Truman will be maid of honor. Yesterday's breakfast included all the members of the wedding party.

Another Sunday party honored Mrs. Lee J. Perrin of New York, mother-in-law of Representative Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., who was a house guest of Mrs. McCook Knox of Georgetown over the weekend. A luncheon in her honor was given yesterday at the Sulgrave Club by Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling.

VICE ADMIRAL Robert B. Carney and Mrs. Carney are leaving Washington early next month for a few weeks' vacation in the Florida Keys before the Admiral takes over new duties as commander of the Atlantic Second Task Fleet.

Meanwhile, a number of farewell parties are being given in their honor, among them being a small supper party last evening by Rear Admiral and Mrs. John W. Roper, Vice Admiral and Mrs. William M. Fechteler, who are also leaving Washington early next month, shared honors at the party. Admiral Fechteler is to replace Admiral W. H. P. Blandy as commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet, and both Admiral Carney and Admiral Fechteler will be stationed at Norfolk, Va.

ANOTHER farewell party, this one for Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John A. Chapman, was given by Col. and Mrs. Hector M. Aring at their apartment at the Hotel 2400. General Chapman, retiring head of the Australian joint services staff, is leaving early next month for Australia. His successor, Adm. Harold B. Farncomb, and Mrs. Farncomb, were among yesterday's guests.

Others included Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, USAF, and Mrs. Vandenberg; Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William Howard Arnold; Brigadier and Mrs. Dilip Chaudhuri of the Indian Embassy; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Franklin Brannan; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas O. Hardin; the Naval Attache of the Embassy of Thailand and Princess Abhakorn, and many more.

A luncheon at the Italian Embassy was given Saturday by the Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani, honoring David Zellerbach, chief of ECA in Italy.

Tobé Says... Crisp Tailored Suits Smart Under Coats

For the past few seasons, fashion emphasis has been on softly tailored or dressmaker suits. Now the crisp tailored suit is staging a fashion comeback for spring, much to the delight of smart younger women who have always preferred it to any other.

It's a wonderful suit to buy right now because it looks so smart under a winter coat. The newest jackets are about 25 inches long—or just covering the hips. Waistlines are nipped in a little to give a trim fitted look and the closings are either double or single breasted, whichever you like.

Skirts? Slim of course, but with room enough to walk in.

Sub-Deb Ushers Chosen for Ice Show Opening

A special corps of young ladies will be on hand this evening when the Ice Capades of 1950 opens a 10-day run at Uline Arena. Ask Anne How to Stiffen Rug

Have any of your contributors met and mastered this problem? How can I stiffen a loosely crocheted 8 by 10 foot rug? It appears tightly crocheted—no holes showing—but it is a trap for tripping feet.

It is oval in shape, in lovely bands of gray, dark blue, and black, and is crocheted with cotton strips, not wool. J. C. G.

Any suggestions for J. C. G., readers?

This question may be a little out of season, but I want to be prepared. How should window screens be washed so that they are really clean? We have washed them with the hose and with a cloth but, after the first rain, my windows on the outside are splattered with dirt. A Reader.

Here's an idea that should not only eliminate those splattered windows but make the screens last longer too:

First, clean them thoroughly (out of doors) with a dry cleaning fluid. This will remove any greasy deposits, as well as other dirt. Then apply a thin coat of varnish to the screening. Use any good quality spar-varnish, thinned with an equal amount of a half-and-half mixture of linseed oil and turpentine.

When applied with a brush, any finish is likely to fill in the meshes, although mesh can be cleared by following with dry brush. A better method is to apply the varnish with a piece of carpeting tacked around a block of wood with the nap side exposed. A little varnish is brushed on the carpeting, to be transferred to the screening.

It's a good idea to clean and varnish screens before putting away. This keeps them from rusting during the winter months. One varnishing will last an entire season.

Can any readers advise me of a trick to secure the bedclothes on the underneath section of a studio couch that becomes twin beds? E. J.

Any suggestions, readers?

My 9-year-old son is an enthusiastic member of the "cowboy crowd." He has a birthday soon and I have thought of having a pancake party for him instead of the traditional party. We were given an electric griddle for Christmas, so that part is easy, but would you please suggest some games, etc., for the crowd of little ranch hands (six or eight) that we will have. M. K.

You might have a "saddling-the-horse" variation of that favorite party game, "pinning the tail on the donkey." You could draw a horse on a big sheet of paper and fasten it to the wall. A saddle to fit the critter could then be drawn on another piece of paper and colored appropriately. Blindfolded, the boys could go up one by one and see who could come nearest to pinning the saddle on at the proper spot.

Another idea would be a variation of quoits. Either the rings from a quoit game could be used or circles of rope. These could be used to "lasso a steer." A toy cow from the 10-cent store, fastened to a block of wood, could serve in this capacity. The throwing line should be 7 or 8 feet distant.

Score should be kept, giving a boy three points each time he lassoes the animal. A near miss (when the lasso touches the board) could give him one point, just for the sake of encouragement. If desired, you could divide the boys in two teams for this game. Prizes for the games could be inexpensive articles carrying out the Western idea. Your youngster will probably have plenty of ideas on this score.

Now that Congress is back in session, I would like very much to see it in action. Could you tell me how one goes about getting admittance? E.B.B.

The public galleries of both the Senate anr House of Representatives are open to everyone. Of course, you might have difficulty in finding a seat there when some important piece of legislation is coming up, but ordinarily you should have no trouble. Your Senator or Representative might also give you a card admitting you to the gallery reserved for the families and friends of members of Congress.

Re: H. W.'s request for bamboo base for lamp: I have a friend living in Florida who has a "stand" of bamboo on her property and would, I am sure, be glad to furnish a lamp base. She would, however, need to know the height and diameter. If H. W. will call me on the telephone any evening after 6 o'clock, (KIng 8-8167) I shall be glad to give her the address. I know of no stores that sell the bamboo. I can wire it if H. W. can't. Have made several for myself and for gifts. J.U.

'This I Remember'

Roosevelt, Farley Split on 1940 Wallace Nomination

This is another installment of the serialization of "This I Remember," the nonfiction best seller in which Eleanor Roosevelt tells the story of Franklin D. Roosevelt's career, from 1921 to his death in 1945. Succeeding installments will be printed in The Washington Post through February 4.

By Eleanor Roosevelt

MISS THOMPSON and I went to Hyde Park, where we were joined by one of our friends. Life was very placid, when suddenly one day the telephone rang. Miss Frances Perkins was on the wire. She said: "Things look black here; the temper of the convention is very ugly. The President should come to Chicago if he wants Mr. Wallace nominated, but if he won't come I think you should." I told her I thought it utter nonsense for me to go, but I suggested she tell my husband how urgently he was needed there. I felt there was nothing I could do. Miss Perkins rang off, saying she would talk to Franklin. When she called him he insisted that he would not go, but said that if he were nominated he wanted Henry Wallace as his running mate.

The next day Frances Perkins called again and said my husband had told her he would be quite willing to have me go if she felt it essential. I said: "Franklin may be willing, but how do I know how Jim Farley feels about it? I certainly am not going out there unless he invites me. I know there is bad feeling because Harry Hopkins has been more or less running things and perhaps has not always been very tactful in the way he's handled the situation. I certainly not going to add to the hard feelings." She then wanted to know if a definite invitation from Jim would bring me. I said of course, that first I would have to ask my husband. After she had finished talking I called Franklin and told him what Frances Perkins had said. He said: "It might be very nice for you to go, but I do not think it is in the least necessary." I said: "If Jim Farley asks me to go do you think it would be wise?" He replied: "Yes, I think it would be."

Then I waited, and later in the morning the telephone rang and Jim Farley asked me to come out.

I called Mr. C. R. Smith of American Airlines, and asked him if he were going to Chicago. He said he was going the next day, and I asked if I might go with him.

On landing in New York I saw my young Franklin coming toward me. And I must confess I was very glad to have him along. We met Mr. Smith and left immediately. Jim Farley was at the airfield in Chicago when we landed late in the afternoon.

Silent With Farley

THEN JIM FARLEY and I drove alone into Chicago. On the way he told me Franklin had not talked to him since the convention had opened and had never confided in him his choice for the Vice Presidency. I was both shocked and saddened to realize that things had come to such a pass between these two men, for I had always had a feeling of real friendship for Jim Farley. I carefully listened while he told me his reason for thinking that Jesse Jones or William Bankhead or Paul McNutt or some other candidates should get the nomination. He also told me that Elliott, who was a resident of Texas at that time and a member of the State delegation, was planning to second Mr. Jesse Jones' nomination.

I said that before any move was made he should talk to my husband. I went directly to the hotel where Jim had his offices and called Franklin. I told him what his old friend had said and also that I had just learned he had not talked to Jim. I then suggested that he talk to him now and tell him how he felt. I expressed no preference for any candidate. I think the description of the convention Jim Farley gave in his articles, as far as my part is concerned, was his impression of what I said rather than what I actually said. He quoted me as saying to my husband: "I've been talking to Jim Farley, and I agreed with him Henry Wallace won't do. I know, Franklin, but Jesse Jones would bolster the ticket, win it business support and get the party contributions." Jim Farley had said these things to me, and I repeated very carefully what he had said. However, it had never been my habit to express a preference or an opinion on matters of this kind, and I am sure I did not change my ways on this occasion.

When Jim Farley got on the telephone my husband evidently told him that Mr. Wallace was the one he wanted. Jim argued with him rather halfheartedly, but Franklin insisted upon Wallace. He evidently felt at that time that Wallace could be trusted to carry out our policies of foreign affairs if by chance he found himself hurled into the Presidency. Franklin's feeling then was so strong that he was willing to insist on his running mate and thereby give him a chance to prove his ability. It was then that Jim Farley said: "You're the boss. If you say so I will do all I can to nominate Wallace, but I will have to work fast." He turned to me and said he would have to get Elliott, because he was about to second the nomination of Jesse Jones; that Paul McNutt was strong too; and we would have to get to the convention hall as quickly as possible. During the drive I could see that Jim was much disturbed.

Elliott Refrains

AS SOON as we arrived at the convention hall Jim turned me over to Frances Perkins and Lorena Hickok and disappeared. I went to my seat immediately, got hold of Franklin, jr., and told him to find Elliott. Naturally I wanted to stop him before he had a chance to nominate a candidate his father opposed. Elliott came over, and we talked for a minute. He told me that Jim Farley had already reached him with the information, so he did no nominating.

I saw Edward J. Flynn and a number of other people walking about, and many of them spoke to me briefly. Suddenly in the midst of the turmoil and confusion Frank Walker came over and said: "We think now is the time for you to speak."

I made up my mind that what I said would be brief. I had prepared nothing, but I decided to base my short speech on the conversation I had heard in the hotel. If Franklin felt the strain of a third term might be too much for any man and that Mr. Wallace was the man who could carry on best in times such as we were facing, he was entitled to have his help. No one should think of himself but only of the job that might have to be done.

The only way to accomplish my aim was to persuade the delegates to the convention to sink all personal interests in the interests of the country and to make them realize the potential dangers in the situation we were facing. While I spoke there was a complete silence, in striking contrast to the pandemonium that had hitherto prevailed.

Then the balloting began. Franklin, jr., and I kept tallies on the roll calls, and for a while Mr. Wallace did not do very well. Mrs. Wallace sat beside me. I doubt that she had ever tried to follow a roll call before. She looked very unhappy and asked: "Why do you suppose they are so opposed to Henry?" I did not have time to explain that probably most of the people had been sent in purposely to demonstrate for someone else.

As soon as Henry Wallace's nomination as Franklin's running mate was announced I left the convention hall, asking Mrs. Wallace to congratulate her husband for me. I drove directly back to the airfield and boarded the plane. As we started to taxi down the field someone waved at us frantically. We stopped, and I was told to come back, that my husband was on the telephone. He told me he had listened to my speech and that I had done a very good job. Harry Hopkins was an another wire waiting to speak to me, and he said virtually the same thing. Then I dashed back to the plane, and we took off.

Forced to Act

WHEN Franklin and I next met we talked the whole thing over. I told him I thought it a mistake to leave Jim so uninformed, although I realized that the rift had become deep and that Franklin had simply hated to call him. My husband always insisted, however, that Harry Hopkins had no headquarters and no official authority. And Franklin had kept hands off because to act was so disagreeable; only when he was forced to act by the way things were going did he do so. My going out to Chicago, my talk with Jim and the resulting call to Franklin had forced him to say definitely what he wanted, but he never told me this in so many words. On several occasions he said to others: "Her speech was just right." I think he thought that people should know by their own feelings when they had done well.

The next day Franklin announced the agreement to send Great Britain 50 of our over-age destroyers for naval and air bases in Newfoundland and the West Indies. About two weeks later, on September 16, he signed the Universal Service Act, which had gone through by one vote. Then I began to feel that war was very close. It had already come close to us personally, since Elliott had enlisted. He had had some aviation training and hoped to get into the Air Force. His eyes were very bad, but triumphantly he told me that a new kind of lens he had just acquired enabled him to take off and land an airplane. And he had his civilian pilot's license.

A little while later he was commissioned a captain and sent to Wright Field. Inevitably he was attacked in the 1940 campaign because he had been made a captain, one of many issues used by the opposition in the hope of defeating Franklin. It always seemed to me completely unfair that Elliott should have to suffer because his father decided to run for a third term, but fairness does not enter into political strategy. Franklin and I had long since learned to accept this sort of personal attack. Elliott, however, was extremely bitter, because he saw other people appointed to the same rank in exactly the same way, frequently with less background and fewer qualifications than his.

I resented criticisms of this kind very deeply for him and for our other children, but I kept telling myself that these were things that made one stronger if one learned to take them well. It is useless to resent anything in this world; one must learn to look upon whatever happens as part of one's education in life and make it serve a good purpose in the formation of character. At the same time I could be amused at the attacks on me personally, especially the large campaign buttons announcing "We don't want Eleanor, either," which many women wore.

In the campaign of 1940 Franklin intended to make no speeches except over the radio, but he finally was persuaded to make a few. I do not think he ever felt the bitterness toward Mr. Willkie that he felt toward some of his other opponents; I do not remember his ever saying anything derogatory about him in conversation. This does not mean that he did not feel the Democratic Party should remain in power.

The campaign trips that year were extremely short. As usual we spent election day at Hyde Park.

Britons Still Seeking To Hear Miss Truman

London, Jan. 22 (U.P.).—The newspaper News of the World today said that negotiations "are still going on" to bring Margaret Truman to Britain for a series of concerts.

"New York critics have not been kind about Miss Truman's performances," the newspaper said, "but the public have thoroughly enjoyed them. And the public knows what it wants."

50,000 Followers Mark Birthday of Aga Khan

Bombay, India, Jan 22 (AP).—The absence of the Aga Khan, owing to a slight illness, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of 50,000 Ismaili followers who blocked traffic for 45 minutes in the heart of the Moslem area of Bombay to celebrate his seventy-third birthday today.

His wife, joining in the day-long celebration, smilingly blessed the participants. The Aga Khan is the wealthy spiritual ruler of the Ismailis.

Looks Like Things Are Tough All Over

Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., reports that on the windshield of a Government bus, facing the passengers, he spotted a sign which read:

"Don't Talk Shop."

RISKY BUSINESS

If those birds who held up the Boston Brink's office don't declare that $1,500,000 on their income tax returns, they're liable to get into a lot of trouble.

CART BEFORE THE HORSE

The superintendent of Baltimore's Recreation Bureau defends the barring of zoot-suiters from recreation centers with the explanation that "extreme dress" often leads to poor behavior.

He might also have noted that poor behavior often leads to extreme dress.

KID STUFF

He appeared to be about 5 years old, and was zipping along on his shiny new tricycle just as fast as his little legs could work the pedals.

"Hello, Sonny," said a woman who was passing. "Did Santa Claus bring you that tricycle?"

"I can't stop, lady," the boy flung over his shoulder as he whizzed by. "I've gotta get home before my gas gives out."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

"Battleground" may or may not be a good picture; I haven't seen it yet.

But in all the publicity given this movie, can't somebody besides those of us who were there recall that it was Combat Command B of the 10th Armored Division that stopped the German advance at Bastogne, almost a full day ahead of the arrival of the 101st Airborne?

John Flowers, jr.,
221 Audrey lane se.

Dear Sarge:

I checked with Washington Post Reporter Marshall Andrews, whose new book "Disaster Through Air Power" (Rinehart, $2) goes on sale today. He says:

"Your correspondent appears to reflect the isolation of individuals on the battlefield which is so much a part of modern war. Even high commanders, with all their facilities for communication, usually lose touch with engaged units during violent action."

Actually, says Marshall, the commanding officers of Combat Command B and the 101st Airborne arrived at VIII Corps headquarters, Bastogne, at the same time on the afternoon of December 18, 1944. And elements of CCB and the 101st Airborne became engaged on the Bastogne perimeter only a few hours apart.

As a parting shot, he adds: "Perhaps the major share of credit for the defense of Bastogne might well go to the 28th and 106th Infantry Divisions, which were shattered by the German assault, but which held long enough for CCB and the 101st to get into position."

I cite this opinion not in an attempt to minimize the contribution of any unit, but rather to emphasize the teamwork that made victory possible.

LIFE IS LIKE THAT

Texas, geographically the largest State in the Union, is represented in the District by a relatively small and unimportant avenue.

Rhode Island, geographically the smallest State in the Union, is represented by a long, heavily traveled avenue.

And California, one of our most populous States, rates only a street, and no avenue at all.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Crusade Against H-Bomb Planned

By Drew Pearson

At a secret meeting with General Bradley recently, Atomic Energy Chairman Lilienthal made a last-ditch, emotional plea against the hydrogen bomb. In effect, he said: "We must exhaust every means of reaching an agreement with Russia to outlaw atomic warfare before we make this bomb. We should appeal over the heads of the Kremlin to the Russian people. They will force Stalin to come to terms."

Lilienthal

Lilienthal speaks for a tormented group of scientists who made the atomic bombs used at Hiroshima and Nagasaki and who agreed—somewhat against their better judgment—that the bombs should be dropped on enemy cities.

It is still a secret in the files of the Manhattan District, but the atomic scientists were sharply divided into three groups. One did not want the bomb used at all. They urged that the President announce that we had the bomb and would use it unless the enemy surrendered. Group No. 2 wanted the atomic bomb dropped over an uninhabited area as a warning.

Group No. 3 approved the action taken at Hiroshima. This included Dr. Robert Oppenheimer and Dr. Harold Urey.

But when the photographs of seared flesh and the medical reports from Nagasaki and Hiroshima came back, these scientists went through the tortures of the damned. Their souls were on fire, and they started a burning private crusade against the hydrogen bomb that has divided the Atomic Energy Commission.

The spirit of these scientists was expressed by Dr. Oppenheimer to a congressional hearing as follows: "Many times we scientists thought the war might end before we had a bomb. But some of us did not stop, because we wanted the world to see the atomic bomb. It was to us the greatest argument for world peace."

Strauss Strongly Backed

These scientists and Lilienthal are planning to organize a lobby of church groups to carry on the "crusade' after Lilienthal's resignation from the atomic commission in February.

The other side in the hydrogen-bomb argument is championed by a modest, soft-spoken philosopher and former banker, Lewis Strauss. He shuns publicity and his views can be given only because fellow commissioners are shocked by the attacks on him by the pro-Lilienthal forces.

Strauss is quoted as saying, "All hope of international agreement to outlaw the atom bomb was killed when Russia refused to accept the Baruch proposals for inspection. That was the great shock of our times. Now we cannot afford not to make the new hydrogen bomb. We must maintain our superiority over any possible agressor. That is the chief hope left for peace."

The difficult decision whether to build the dread hydrogen bomb is now up to President Truman.

Limiting AF Groups

Here is a startling fact that will come out when Congress reopens the debate on a 70-group Air Force. By limiting the Air Force to 48 groups, President Truman is holding it down to 16 groups less than before Pearl Harbor. The Air Force had 64 groups the day the Japs bombed Pearl Harbor, built this up to 243 groups by the end of the war.

Atomgrad Separate World

Atomgrad, the Soviet's atomic energy center in Armenia, is surrounded by high, closely guarded walls and is a separate world for 70,000 people. It is situated 55 miles northwest of Mount Ararat and 32 miles northwest of Yerevan, the capital of Soviet Armenia. Atomgrad is in the upper valley of the Zanga River and obtains immense hydroelectric power from the rivers coursing down from the 17,000-foot mountain peaks.

Note—It is now easy to understand why the Russians held up the American missionaries in search of Noah's ark near Mount Ararat. An atomic scientist was in their party, and Atomgrad is only 55 miles away.

Truman and Johnson

At a recent White House staff conference, President Truman silenced rumors that Louis Johnson, the blunt Secretary of Defense, is on the skids.

Good naturedly, the President told his conference "Loule's been reading too many newspapers, and they've got him down. I told him I was still 100 percent back of him, and if I ever decided otherwise, he'd hear it straight from me and not from a columnist."

Mr. Truman then looked severely at the little group of assistants and remarked, "I don't want any of you peddling stories that Louie Johnson or anyone else is on the outs with me. That isn't the way I operate."

The President also told Undersecretary of State Jim Webb to shut up any anti-Johnson "leaks" from the State Department.
